

Samuel Insull, feeling that there could be only one verdict, had given was "delighted" with the outcome. Martin said: "This is the end of a long road, but a pleasant one."

Another road loomed ahead of him a few minutes later as his second embezzlement case was called, that of the use of $26,000 of the funds of the Mississippi Valley Utilities company in another private brokerage transaction. This was set for Jan. 15.

They will decide later as to what to do with it. Lieut. Frank Johnson, who brought back Martin Insull from Canada last March under parole, was in the courtroom ready to take charge of his man if the case were finally disposed of.

When this occurs, either by trial or not, Martin will be taken back to the immigration authorities in Detroit and surrendered by Lieut. Johnson. Mr. Insull has said that he wants to return to Canada, so there probably will be no necessity for further action by the federal government in this matter. He has a job or the choice of several jobs in Canada, it is said.

The courtroom scene following the verdict was a happy one for the Insulls and their friends.

A Flurry of Autographs.

One of the jurors, Frank Herout, 1509 South 5th street, Clear Lake, started out to get autographs of the Insulls and the other jurors and the lawyers on a telegraph blank. Others followed his example and the Insulls were soon busy writing their signatures on a variety of papers. Martin shook hands with Prosecutor O'Hara, whose address before the jury had flayed him as a thief, and said, "No hard feelings."

Then Insull shook the hand of each juror and said:

"I wish you gentlemen a very merry Christmas. You have certainly helped to make mine happy."

The jurors thanked the judge and the lawyers on both sides for their conduct of the case. One of the jurors, looking at O'Hara, said:

"I'm sorry we couldn't give you both a verdict. The Christmas spirit had evidently crept into the courtroom."

Jurors Call for Charter.

Shortly before noon yesterday, the jury seeking to iron out differences and hasten the arrival at a verdict had sent for the charter of the Middle West company. The section of the charter which particularly interested the jurors was section 9, which authorized officers of the company to buy or sell stock as they wish, without any requirement of reporting their transactions or profits to the stockholders.

This charter, according to the defense, gave perfect legal sanction for the act of Martin Insull called into question in the trial—the stock transaction from which arose the $344,720 embezzlement charge—which is that of taking money of the company and subsidiaries and applying it to the purchase of stock which he had been ordered to take out of the Davis firm where they had been held as collateral in a private trading account.

Study McCormick Testimony.

An hour later the jurors sent for the testimony of Oliver E. McCormick, treasurer and vice president of the Middle West company. They wanted both his direct and cross-examination. Mr. McCormick had come nobly to the aid of the defense in this trial, testifying that the stocks which had been purchased with the $344,720 had been considered a good investment by him.

Another bit of evidence called for by the jurors was the testimony of Louis Ferguson and Edward W. Lloyd, vice presidents of the Commonwealth Edison company and former directors of Middle West. They had testified that the purchase of the securities was not known to them at the time and that they never heard of it until it came in question [syndicate A] until they read about it in the newspapers.

EX-BUSINESS MAN, ONCE RICH, JAILED AS METER "FIXER"

Otto Altschul, 50 years old, 11 East Erie street, once a wealthy real estate operator, was fined $10 and sentenced to 45 days in the Bridewell yesterday by Municipal Judge Gibson E. Gorman. Altschul was found guilty in a bench trial of tampering with an electric meter.

Sigurd Semby, a special agent for the Commonwealth Edison company, testified that a watchman assigned to a large building at 1932 North Dearborn street had seen Altschul tampering with the meter on Nov. 27. He said the company had been defrauded of $2,000 by meter tampering in the building during the last six months. Altschul filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in 1928 in which he listed liabilities of $1,200,000 and assets of $400,000.

INSULL CAN BE TRIED ON U. S. COUNTS UNLESS HE LEAVES IN 30 DAYS

Since his acquittal in the state court, Martin Insull can be tried on two federal charges pending against him unless he leaves the United States within thirty days, was the opinion expressed yesterday by United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green.

"I have not yet looked up the exact wording of the extradition treaty with Canada," Mr. Green said, "but it is my opinion that if Mr. Insull remains voluntarily in this country for thirty days he may be tried in the federal court."

Generally speaking, under the treaty, Mr. Insull could only be tried for the crime for which he was extradited.

The federal charges pending are mail fraud and transferring assets in bankruptcy with knowledge of insolvency.

Mr. Green refused to comment on whether Martin Insull's acquittal would affect prosecution of Samuel Insull and his sons on the later charge. They have already been acquitted on the former.

ARM VIGILANTES IN SHELBYVILLE; 4TH VICTIM DIES

Shelbyville, Tenn., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—Vigilantes and National Guardsmen completed preparations tonight to quickly quell any threat of renewal of tomorrow's holiday crowds of the recent racial disorders which have already taken four lives.

The death toll reached four today when Floyd [Pat] Lawes, 28, a farmer, died in the local hospital. He was shot in the head Wednesday when state troopers used bayonets and bullets to repulse a lynch-minded mob that stormed the courthouse in three vain attempts to seize a colored man on trial for raping a white school girl.

Two men were killed the day of the outbreak, which was climaxed by the dynamiting and burning of the town's $150,000 courthouse after the colored defendant had been spirited away to Nashville, disguised as a militiaman and wearing a gas mask. Clifford Freeman, 46, a machinist, succumbed late yesterday to abdominal bayonet wounds.

Although the town has remained peaceful yesterday and today, the 600 guardsmen assigned to the area were ordered to stay here until Sunday morning to be on hand for any possible outbreak among the expected Christmas crowds tomorrow.

RECOUNT UPSETS HARVARD SENIOR CLASS ELECTION

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—For what is believed to be the first time in Harvard's 300 year history of senior class elections, a recount vote for first marshal tonight showed an upset. As a result, Herman Gundlach Jr., of Houghton, Mich., captain of the 1934 Harvard football team, was declared first marshal and Ebenezer F. Bowditch of Concord, who last week appeared the winner, now becomes second marshal. The recount gave Gundlach the election by four votes. It did not alter the standing of Arthur W. Todd of Cleveland, O., third marshal. In his freshman year Bowditch was president of the class.

U. S. GRAND JURY REOPENS MALOY INCOME INQUIRY

Calls 15, Including Movie Union Officials.

Fifteen witnesses were summoned to the United States courthouse yesterday as the government resumed the oft-interrupted investigation of the income tax returns of Thomas E. Maloy, czar of the turbulent motion picture operators' union.

As the investigation proceeded, Attorney Thomas D. Nash appeared before Federal Judge John P. Barnes and moved for permission to investigate the subpoena previously directed against Thomas J. Reynolds, president of the union. The subpoena called for all books and records of the union from 1929 to 1934.

Block Move to Halt Quiz.

Assistant United States Attorney E. Riley Campbell, who had been in the federal grand jury room, hurried to the courtroom to oppose the move.

Judge Barnes denied Attorney Nash's motion and a second to quash the subpoena.

As a result, Reynolds went into the jury room and was the first witness. The remainder of the fifteen witnesses were called in later.

Among the fifteen were Ralph O'Hara, a business agent for the union, who was acquitted of the fatal shooting of Ralph Oser, leader of a rebel faction; E. D. [Jack] Miller, head of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, and Dr. Emmett Quinn, another official of the union.

It was reported that the investigation was reopened following a raid by gunmen on the Maloy home near Michigan City, Ind., in which $53,000 was reported to have been taken.

Inquiry Dies and Revives.

Maloy's income tax payments first came under scrutiny by the government early in 1933. The investigation apparently died away and again came to light later in the year.

The investigation again dropped out of sight and flared into notice once more in January this year. At this time Miller faced two contempt citations before his testimony finally pleased the investigators.

It was learned that Miller had told investigators that he had paid more than $85,000 in graft to a "member of the union." He declared that he was his solemn belief that Maloy did not control the union and insisted that the payments were not made to Maloy.

Following hearing on the contempt citations against Miller, the investigation again disappeared from public notice until witnesses appeared at the courthouse today.

ELEVATOR MEN SIGN CONTRACT; ENDS STRIKE PLAN

The threatened strike of the Elevator Operators and Starters' union was called off yesterday when the union signed a year's compromise agreement with the Building Managers' association, providing for an increase in pay.

It provides an increase of $7 a month for elevator operators and $9.25 a month for starters. Working conditions and hours are to remain the same as in the past.

The present agreement will be in force until Dec. 31, when the agreement signed yesterday will replace it. Each side was represented by a committee of five at yesterday's conference. The union delegation was led by Matt Taylor, union president, and Thomas C. O'Brien, business agent.

Graham Aldis, president of the building managers, led the representation from that group.

INDIANAPOLIS WOMAN HELD TO GRAND JURY AS BABY KIDNAPER

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—Nineteen-year-old Dorothy Marsh, accused of kidnapping a four-day-old baby boy, was bound over to the grand jury today under a $5,000 bond for a preliminary hearing in Municipal court.

Mrs. Marsh said she had not had time to consult an attorney, but Detective Jack Small and Albert Kelly said she admitted the kidnapping on Thursday of William Joseph Robbins.

Physicians who examined Mrs. Marsh said she might have been motivated by a strange mental reaction following the premature birth of a child of her own.

To officers Mrs. Marsh said that by assuming motherhood she hoped to regain the affections of her husband, Porter Marsh, a garage mechanic, to whom she was married last July.

Mrs. Marsh, now a patient in a Plymouth, Ind., hospital as the result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident, filed suit for divorce from Mrs. Marsh here Oct. 1. He charged cruel and inhuman treatment.

The Robbins baby, back home after being in possession of the kidnaper for four hours, apparently suffered no ill effects from the kidnapping. The baby's father is 29 years old, a worker on relief projects.

Mrs. Marsh told officers her maiden name was Dorothy Lang and that her father is George Lang of Louisville, Ky.

BULLET HITS HAT, BUT IT'S NOT HIS HEAD THAT HURTS

William Reed, 59 years old, 945 Madison street, sat uneasily on a pillow in a cell at the Cragin police station yesterday and considered his good fortune.

On Thursday night Reed flinched the front door on the home of Philip Schuh, 3049 North Menard avenue, and entered. Mrs. Kathryn Davis, who lives at 3047 North Menard avenue, telephoned the police.

Policemen Joseph Nichol and Theodore Harris responded and led Reed from the house. Outside Reed tripped Nichol and ran. Harris gave chase and fired five shots, missing with all of them. Then he stopped and took careful aim.

As the policeman fired, Reed slipped and fell on the icy sidewalk. When the policeman reached Reed's side the latter was examining a bullet hole in his hat.

"Does your head hurt?" the policeman asked.

Finds Three Dynamite Sticks on His Auto Seat

Frank Korte, 419 South Taylor avenue, Oak Park, found three sticks of dynamite last night on the seat of his automobile, which he left parked at Clark street and Foster avenue. He reported to the Summerdale police and added that he had no enemies, so far as he knew, who would wish to harm him. Korte is the manager of the West Side Distributors, Inc., 3945 5th avenue, beer merchants.

COZZI CONVICTED IN JAIL POISONING DEATH; 14 YEARS

Slayer Grins at Compromise Verdict.

CRIMINAL COURT.
James O'Brien, habitual criminal, sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary; Felix Brzezinski, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years; Edward Hawkins, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years; Fay Lomph, receiving stolen property, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell, by Judge Harry B. Miller.

After deliberating for almost 18 hours, a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Walter P. Steffen yesterday found Lawrence Cozzi, 25 years old, guilty of the murder by poison of Rocco Pisano, a county jail prisoner. The jurors fixed Cozzi's punishment at 14 years in the penitentiary.

A defense motion for a new trial was set by Judge Steffen for argument on Jan. 2. The verdict was reported reached as a compromise after one juror had argued all night for acquittal, while the other eleven held out for life imprisonment.

Apparently greatly relieved to have escaped the death penalty, Cozzi grinned broadly as the verdict was read. His mother, two sisters, and a brother congratulated him as Defense Attorney Frank A. O'Donnell polled the jury.

Prosecutor Assails Verdict.

"It's a gross miscarriage of justice," Assistant State's Attorney Richard A. Devine said as the jurors left the courtroom after refusing to comment on the verdict.

The death of Pisano climaxed a campaign of terror that grew out of preparations for the trial of two men for assault on Constable John Griffin of Bellwood. The state charged that Cozzi delivered arsenic, filled sandwiches to the county jail for Harold Clifford, a prisoner, on Sept. 30.

Lack of Hunger Saves Life.

Clifford, it was reported, had offered to testify for the state against the defendants in the assault case. As it happened, he was not hungry when the sandwiches were delivered and gave them to his cellmates. Pisano died the day after he ate the food.

Cozzi was arrested after jail guards had identified his picture as that of the man who delivered the sandwiches. Following the poisoning, Charles Konowski and Frank Piranio, who were charged with assault to kill Constable Griffin, were tried and sentenced to terms of one to 14 years each in the penitentiary.

WARNS HOLIDAY DRIVERS TO USE EXTRA CAUTION

Motorists planning holiday travel were warned yesterday by Bert Vandervort of the Chicago Motor club that roads surrounding Chicago are covered with a dangerous coating of ice.

"Roads for hundreds of miles around Chicago resemble a huge spider web of ice," he said. "Holiday travel inquiries are 30 per cent heavier this year than last, indicating that there will be many cars on the roads and consequently many accidents. In the Pennsylvania mountains roads had to be sandbed this week. Ice roads make motoring a hazard as far south as St. Louis. Drive slowly and use chains."

WHAT! NO STEAKS IN JAIL? SHERIFF CONVINCES REBEL

Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of Lake county reported yesterday that he had nipped in the bud a hunger strike and threatened riot by the prisoners in the jail at Waukegan because they weren't allowed to have steak and French fried potatoes any more.

Some days ago Sheriff Doolittle ruled that electric stoves must be removed and that inmates prisoners could no longer send out for steaks, mushrooms, French fries, and the like. They could eat bean soup and stew, the sheriff said, and like it.

Dr. Harold B. Cassidy, a federal prisoner held in the jail because of his alleged connection with the "face lifting" of John Dillinger, began the trouble, according to Sheriff Doolittle. The doctor urged the prisoners to stand up for their rights—including steak and mushrooms.

Recognizing that trouble threatened, Sheriff Doolittle put Dr. Cassidy in solitary confinement, where he went on a hunger strike. Yesterday the sheriff was proud to announce that the two-day hunger strike was over. The doctor has agreed to eat soup and stew with the rest of them.

SLOW IN RAISING HANDS, VICTIM OF HOLDUP IS SHOT

Because he was slow in obeying the commands of two colored bandits, Gottlieb Bernstein, 39 years old, 3353 Ogden avenue, a baker, was shot in the abdomen by one of the robbers last night. He was taken to the county hospital in a critical condition.

Bernstein was walking in front of 1228 West 13th street, witnesses said, when the robbers, one displaying a revolver, demanded him to "stick 'em up." Before he could raise his hands the armed robbers fired once and both died. Passersby called the Maxwell street police.

EDUCATION BOARD NAMED BY MAYOR SAVES MILLIONS

1932 'Low Ebb' Spending Is Undercut.

The school economy program instituted by the board of education named by Mayor Kelly early in 1933 has effected a saving of $12,370,019 to the taxpayers on the basis of the 1932 low ebb expenditures of the board it succeeded, it was announced yesterday by Harry H. Brackett, school board auditor.

These savings have been accomplished despite construction of five new high schools during the period at a cost of more than $13,000,000. The comparison is made with the $61,947,445 tax fund expenditure of the former board in 1932, the year in which that board touched its absolute low in expenditures.

Assuming a continuation of the $61,947,445 expenditure, he said, a "drastic" economy, the total would be $123,844,890 for the 1932 and 1934 period. The board named by Mayor Kelly, however, expended $111,524,871, saving the $12,370,019.

Schools' Credit Restored.
During this two year period the board has closed a gap in teachers' and employees' salaries, existent since April, 1931, through a loan of $22,200,000 from the federal Reconstruction Finance corporation, and now is paying teachers and employees in full and on time. It has eliminated more than 400 unsafe and unsanitary public school buildings, closed four inadequate branch schools, expanded the high school teaching force, and restored the credit of the schools.

This latter policy, according to Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, made possible the granting of the federal loan which bridged the salary gap last August, and it has since enabled the board to obtain a reduction of 1 per cent in its tax warrant interest rate, and to dispose of warrants, which previously went begging for buyers, at the regular intervals necessary to meet payrolls.

Economies responsible for the $12,370,000 reduction followed two courses. Since salaries are the largest school expense items, these were cut $3,111,805 in 1933 and the reduction was continued into 1934. The board required stringent economy in a school plant construction, maintenance, and operation.

Methods Are Thorough.
An example of the thoroughness of this method is given in the 1934 school building and maintenance fund. When the 1934 budget was passed, it represented a reduction of $133,837 from the 1933 appropriations, despite the fact that that budget, in turn, was $3,530,562 below the so-called "economy" budget of the 1932 budget. B. McCahey, president of the board, announced, however, that he was not satisfied with these economies, and that the board must continue its savings throughout the year. "We'll appropriate this money, but we're going to save as much of it as we possibly can throughout the year," he said.

An estimate of tax fund expenditures for 1934 released by Mr. Brackett yesterday showed that the board spent $59,376,000, as compared with the appropriation of $67,772,515, a decrease of $7,896,515.

The major portion of this saving, $6,024,000, was accomplished in the building fund, since the board had during the year restored elementary school principals to their schools and added high school teachers to comply with demands of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Tells of Building Savings.
The achievement of the building fund saving was described by John C. Christensen, school architect. "Our $13,466,000 building fund demand was based on careful estimates, with no allowance for 'cushion,'" Mr. Christensen said. "However, we could not foresee the effect of the board's economy program."

"During the year this program and Mr. McCahey's insistence that we thoroughly and carefully check all costs and eliminate extravagance wherever possible began to show results. We were frankly amazed at the magnitude of the results."

"In the school repair and improvement fund, for example, we estimated an expenditure of $2,552,495. However, the junior high school reorganization ordered in the summer of 1933, which reduced overcrowding and permitted the elimination of portables, showed effect."

Save from Many Funds.
"We spent only $809,624 from that fund, a saving of $1,742,871. Of this saving approximately $400,000 should be credited to the Illinois Emergency Relief commission for labor furnished, but the rest must be credited to the economy program of the board. For instance, we appropriated $100,000 needed in other years just to move portables. We spent $50,000."

"There was $250,000 for fire prevention. We eliminated dangerous branches and spent $100,000. There was $215,000 for permanent improvements and we spent $140,000 and at the same time repaired every one of the schools. We saved approximately $2,500,000 by revising the architectural plan of new schools without in any way reducing their size and impairing their usefulness."

22 YEARS PRISON AND NOW HE WILL GO BACK TO ITALY

Boyhood Sweetheart Is Waiting There.

Stillwater, Minn., Dec. 21.—(AP)—It felt funny to be free.

Twenty-two years a cobbler in prison. And now Michaelangelo Gentile was going back to Italy and the girl who promised twenty-two years ago to wait.

He walked out of the state prison today to freedom, something he had scarcely dared hope for through the dark years. It felt "funny," he confessed, to be starting back to his beloved Maria Deland, waiting near Naples since he killed a countryman here in 1912 and was sentenced to prison for life.

Will Ask Mussolini for Job.
"First I am going to my uncle's house at Molinara and I am going to ask Mussolini for a job," stuttered Michaelangelo in excitement.

"I can give you no plain answer whether I will get married to Maria when I get there. It depends on how conditions are there."

Michaelangelo "regrets" leaving this country, but the pardon board has stipulated he must be deported to his native land.

Clutching two suitcases carrying all his possessions and dressed in a new dark blue hat, Michaelangelo beamed with joy. When Harry Walsh, his attorney, gave him an envelope containing passport and train and steamer tickets. He shifted it from one side pocket to the other until fearing he would lose it, Walsh took it back and entrusted it to a guard for safekeeping.

NEW YORK ALIMONY CLUB RECEIVES ITS OLDEST MEMBER, 82

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The "alimony club" in the New York county jail today received its oldest member—Philip Heller, 82. Heller not only couldn't remember when he stopped paying alimony to his second wife, who had jailed him, but contended their marriage ceremony had been only a mock wedding. Mrs. Heller charged her husband was $2,295 in arrears on his $25 weekly alimony payments.

"Don't believe him when he says he doesn't know about getting married," Walsh warned. "He's just bashful. He expects to marry her as soon as he gets to Italy."

The 47 year old cobbler will try to see Teresa Peleggi at Valiconga, Italy, when he gets home. She is the widow of the man he killed when he suspected him of stealing $30 of Michaelangelo's money.

Accompanied by two prison guards, Michaelangelo left for St. Paul, where he spent the night in jail. He will leave tomorrow in custody of federal authorities for New York, where he will sail for Italy aboard the liner with Rex, Jan. 5.

10 FREED FROM ALIMONY CELLS FOR CHRISTMAS

Judges to Consider Other Cases Monday.

Christmas gifts of freedom were presented yesterday to ten inmates of alimony row at the county jail by Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort. At the same time Circuit Judges Philip J. Finnegan and Francis B. Allegretti indicated they would grant similar leniency in worthy cases Monday.

The ten prisoners committed on Judge Desort's orders were escorted to his "open house" by Deputy Sheriff Julius Blenz and Mario Pollastrino. After questioning the men as to their intentions of paying their arrears and lecturing them on their responsibilities, Judge Desort granted them continuances of from two to three weeks, which relieves them of the prospect of eating Christmas dinner behind the bars.

Attorney for Wife Protests.

The fate of one wavering in the balance for a time. He is Edwin G. Neise, 729 Montrose avenue, former assistant cashier of the Foreman State National bank, who was committed Sept. 28 for nonpayment of $318 to his estranged wife, Bertha. As Judge Desort was about to free him with the others attorneys for Mrs. Neise protested he would flee the court's jurisdiction if he were released. Bond of $500 was set and Neise indicated the money would be furnished by his sister, Mrs. Edward J. Lehman.

All the men freed, including Neise, are the fathers of children, charged with having failed to contribute to their support. The others, the dates of their commitment, and the amounts they owe are Rhody L. Gates, Oct. 16, $50; Frank Cichowicz Sept. 24, $138; Charles Trinkl, Nov. 14, $380; M. A. Krause, Nov. 17, $401; Antoni Florka, July 12, $467; Walter C. Koeppe, Dec. 10, $559; Arthur Harnden, Dec. 6, $1,038; Arthur Anderson, Oct. 10, $1,105, and Frank Kartanek, July 13, $1,500.

Promise to Seek Jobs.

They were allowed to go after promising they would return on the specified dates and report on the progress of their efforts to get work and pay toward the support of their children.

Two prospective candidates for alimony row avoided membership yesterday by paying $50 each. They are Dr. Theron Akers, a dentist with offices at 7454 Cottage Grove avenue, and Fred Fahlstrom, owner of a plumbing shop at 2422 West 34th street.

Each had been threatened with jail for contempt unless they paid the money. Akers by Judge Desort and Fahlstrom by Judge Finnegan. Both women were represented by Attorney Norman Becker. Akers' former wife, Verna, charged he was $500 behind in his payments. Fahlstrom's divorced wife, Ruby, had accused her former husband of owing her $2,000 in alimony. Each of the men must appear in court later to show cause why they should not be held in contempt.

L. A. Meeker Offers Compromise.

The alimony difficulties of Lawrence A. Meeker with his second wife, Mrs. Ruth Campbell Meeker, appeared yesterday to have been settled, at least temporarily.

DRAFT PLAN FOR KEEPING WATCH UPON PAROLEES

A plan whereby states would cooperate in the supervision of paroled and probationary prisoners was agreed on at a meeting yesterday of a subcommittee of the Central states parole conference, held in Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher's courtroom. Fifteen central western states were represented. Points decided included:

That states may release a prisoner on parole to another state if the parolee has relatives living there; if no relatives reside there, the parolee can enter only on consent of the receiving state.

Officers from one state may go into another for the purpose of apprehending a parole violator without going through extradition formalities.

Each state will supervise the activities of paroled convicts sent in from outside as it does its own. When two states ratify the contract, Judge Fisher explained, the plan goes into operation between those respective states.

GANGSTER'S GIRL DECIDES THIS IS A CRUEL WORLD

Marie Conforti Tells of Her Troubles.

The bitter trials of an ace gangster's girl were related last night in Chicago by Marie Conforti, 21 years old. Marie was the sweetheart of Homer Van Meter, who was shot to death in St. Paul by federal agents, and a companion of John Dillinger and George [Baby Face] Nelson, whose criminal careers also were cut short by bullets.

Among the girl's complaints are: [1] Agents of the department of justice are unrelenting and unnecessarily cruel; [2] gangsters are people of little faith in women and some of them would like to kill her because they believe she is an informer; [3] the sheriff at Eagle River contacted her dog and [4] this is a cold world.

Taken to Court in Madison.

Marie was brought here yesterday from St. Paul, presumably to be a witness in the trial of Attorney Louis Piquett, charged with harboring the notorious Dillinger. Last night she was taken to Madison, Wis., to be re-arrested before Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone, before whom she pleaded guilty last summer to harboring Dillinger, Van Meter and the rest of the gang.

The judge had sentenced her to a year and a day in prison, but suspended sentence and granted her probation for 18 months. She is to answer for the new arraignment to the charge of violating parole. It is expected that she will return to Chicago for the Piquett trial.

Marie's story was told as she awaited the train that took her to the Wisconsin city. An attractive, dark haired girl with an appearance of good breeding, she spoke without reserve.

Hounded by Agents, She Says.

"Why did I violate the probation?" she asked. "Because the federal men hounded me into it. When the judge let me go I came to Chicago and tried to live an honest life. I was a waitress in a restaurant and I clerked in a 10-cent store. If the agents hadn't persecuted me I'd be a good girl now. They took me on long rides, trying to trap me into telling them about Baby Face Nelson. They even made me go out and talk to Nelson's mother. I got so I was afraid some of the boys would see me with the agents and think I was a squealer. So I went back to Homer Van Meter."

Van Meter, with Dillinger, Nelson and John Hamilton, had battled last April with federal agents at Little Bohemia lodge in Mercer county, Wis., and Marie was arrested soon afterward. She had been with the gang there and her conviction was based on this. The gangsters escaped, and when she decided to become a gangster's girl again she joined Van Meter in St. Paul.

Tells of Love for Van Meter.

"They killed Homer," she declared,

BACK IN CHICAGO

"by shooting him before he could draw his gun. He was a fine fellow and I loved him. He was good to me and gave me things—a radio set and a dog. The dog was his last gift and the sheriff at Eagle River kept it for himself, although I wrote asking him for it several times."

According to Marie, John Hamilton was wounded in the Mercer county fight and is dead.

Cicero Mayor's Right to Appoint Aids Upheld

Mayor Joseph G. Cerny of Cicero has the power to name appointive town officers, no matter what the board of trustees says, was the ruling made yesterday by Circuit Judge Joseph Burke. As a result Walter F. Gallos, the Cerny appointee, will be commissioner of public works and Anton Krupicka, backed by the board, will be ousted. Judge Burke's ruling came in quo warranto proceedings brought in behalf of Gallos, who was ousted by the board on Nov. 11.

TWO BOMB SUSPECTS FREED.

Two men, arrested after a stench bomb had been thrown into the city milk store of Ernst Monahan, 3416 Monroe avenue, were discharged by Municipal Judge Edwin Batten yesterday when police admitted they had no evidence against them. The men are Paul Perry, 7544 South Lincoln street, and Albert Vetter, 2240 North Nash avenue.

PERILED SHIPS LIMP HOME AS STORM QUIETS

Atlantic Gales Subside
After Week's Tempest.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—A week of stormy weather at sea wore itself out today and in the northern steamship lanes, where gales and tremendous seas delayed westbound ships, wrecked others and took seventeen lives, moderate westerly winds succeeded the tempest. But the casualties to shipping continued.

The trawler Widgeon, which sent out a distress call during the morning 135 miles northeast of Boston reporting a broken air pump, has made repairs and is proceeding to Boston she signaled later.

The Diamond Transportation company's collier Severance, in danger off Fire Island yesterday because of trouble with her steering gear, also was limping toward her destination, Beverly, Mass., with the coast guard tug Champlain accompanying her.

Rescue Ship Reaches N. Y.

In New York the Ascania of the Cunard-White Star line arrived three days late with tales of its rescue of nine survivors of the British freighter Usworth last Friday 850 miles from Newfoundland.

Capt. J. G. P. Bisset of the Ascania gave credit for the rescue to Mr. Pollett, junior third officer, and the lifeboat crew—ten men chosen from among the sixty, the entire crew of the Ascania, who volunteered.

"I was never so scared in my life," Pollett said. "The seas were breaking in spite of the oil and we saw the lifeboat from the Jean Jodot capsized and the bodies float past."

"We got a few good bumps getting away and it was a long pull over to the Usworth. The wind was throwing the cars right out of the men's hands and when we got within twenty feet I saw it was about a thousand to one chance of our getting alongside."

Three Leap to Death.

"But we had to take a chance and we went alongside. I wanted them to jump one at a time, but the first three jumped together. We couldn't get them and they drowned."

Capt. Bisset said he had received messages of congratulations from approximately 70 persons, including a girl in Philadelphia who said she always wanted to meet a good looking sea hero. Capt. Bisset remarked he has been married 21 years and has no desire to meet any one looking for sea heroes.

BURNING FREIGHTER IS BEACHED; FLAMES IN HOLD ARE HALTED

Boston, Mass., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Flames that had raged uncontrolled for 17 hours in the hold of the 30 year old coastwise freighter Ontario were extinguished this afternoon after the craft had been beached on Governor's Island.

Arthur J. Doyle, Boston agent for the vessel's owners, the Merchants and Miners Transportation company, said the damage to ship and cargo would be heavy. An investigation was under way concerning the cause of the fire.

The fire was discovered last night when the freighter was two miles off Sandwich, south bound for Baltimore and Norfolk.

When her crew of 40 was unable to check the flames the ship called for help and scurried into port here, docking at Northern avenue, where fireboats and land engines pumped tons of water into the hold of the listing ship.

Fearing the list would send the steamer to the harbor bottom, a battery of tugs and fireboats hauled her from the dock and across the harbor to Governor's Island.

FINAL ARGUMENTS ON TRANSFER PLAN SET JAN. 14 BY I.C.C.

The Illinois commerce commission yesterday began its study of the evidence in the universal transfer case, which was started last April at the instance of Mayor Kelly. Hearings were concluded Thursday, and final arguments have been set for Jan. 14. It was indicated yesterday that the establishment of a system of transfers between the surface and elevated lines, if ordered by the commission, would not become effective until about March 1. Benjamin F. Lindheimer, chairman of the commission, said it was not possible to predict what the order of the commission would be.

At Lane Technical High school students followed their usual custom of distributing baskets of food and clothing to needy families.

Party for Hospital Children.

Members of the Junior auxiliary of the Children's Memorial hospital spent yesterday decorating the Christmas trees for the party which is to be held Monday. At that time gifts will be distributed to all the children in the wards.

Last night the china doll and the wooden soldier went on parade at Loyola university when the students held their annual jamboree. The admission to the jamboree was a toy and a small contribution which will be used for the Christmas celebration of the children of the Guardian Angel orphanage.

More than 1,000 safety patrol boys who pilot their fellow pupils across streets in the Hyde Park, Englewood, and Grand Crossing neighborhoods made merry last night at a celebration sponsored by the Schoolboys Patrol association and the Fort Dearborn post, No. 68, of the American Legion. The party was held in the Pershing hotel, 64th street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Children Entertained in Court.

One of the gayest of all parties was the one staged by the social service department of the Municipal court for 700 unfortunate children in the Court of Domestic Relations. Meanwhile their mothers were given a similar party in the women's court. There was carol singing, a playlet by Joseph Richardson Jones of radio's "Uncle Ned," and a toy, candy, and fruit for every child. These were provided by Traffic court fines and through the generosity of friends and merchants. The pre-holiday wave of adoptions was noted yesterday by County Judge Edmund K. Jarocki, who announced that he had entered 27 adoption decrees in the last week. The number is far above other months of the last year.

Fifty Requests for Adoptions.

At St. Vincent's orphanage, where it was announced that 13 babies would find new parents Christmas eve, Miss Bernadine Healy, head of the social service department, revealed that 50 requests for children had been received. All prospective parents assured her that they were not merely moved by the Christmas spirit, but had the plan in mind for some time. It is too late, however, for them to get the babies in time for Christmas, since at least three months must elapse before a baby may be taken into a home.

The Volunteers of America will distribute toys and candy at 2341 Washington boulevard tonight to 500 needy children, and on Sunday to 250 more. The annual distribution of baskets will be on Monday.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

BRITAIN TO FIGHT SHY OF CURRENCY STABILIZATION

Chamberlain Paints Rosy Picture in Parliament.

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
LONDON, Dec. 21.—Balkan kings may be assassinated, Russian commissars may be liquidated, and anti-British Germans may be disposed of, but Great Britain today began a week's Christmas holiday and as far as she is concerned, nothing can happen before next Thursday.

Business houses are closing up until then. Government offices will be empty with only a clerk to answer the telephone.

The Christmas spirit was evident in parliament today. Attendance was thin, most ministers already having left for continental resorts or their British homes. Even the rumor that David Lloyd George, famed Liberal veteran, was planning to make a big speech in pursuance of his comeback campaign failed to draw more than a handful to wind up the session.

Fire Questions at Chamberlain.

The session was taken up with a series of questions to Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, about what he means to do in the way of financial policy to help trade and employment.

Lloyd George, winding up for the heekers, made an appeal for strong action to put men to work instead of paying them to be idle, but he did not disclose any plan of his own. He just wanted to know what Chamberlain intended to do. Chamberlain in reply pointed to the growing improvement in British trade and implied the question is settling itself. He enlarged on the beneficial effects of cheap money and clearly indicated Britain will fight shy of any move toward currency stabilization at the present time.

In the course of his speech the chancellor of the exchequer said:

"I see no reason why we should not anticipate further rise in wholesale prices of primary commodities, which I believe probably would do more to overcome inharmonious elements in the currency system of the world than anything else."

"I look forward with confidence to the day when we shall be able once again to embark upon an international currency standard."

No Reason for Pessimism.

"Meanwhile I don't think that, whatever may be the clouds on the horizon, any of us have reason for pessimism."

"Britain, before giving up her freedom to move the pound where we want it, must wait until there is such a change in the price level as will bring the dollar and franc into greater harmony with one another—the position which is the object, I understand, of the United States administration to bring about and for which I, for one, wish all possible success."

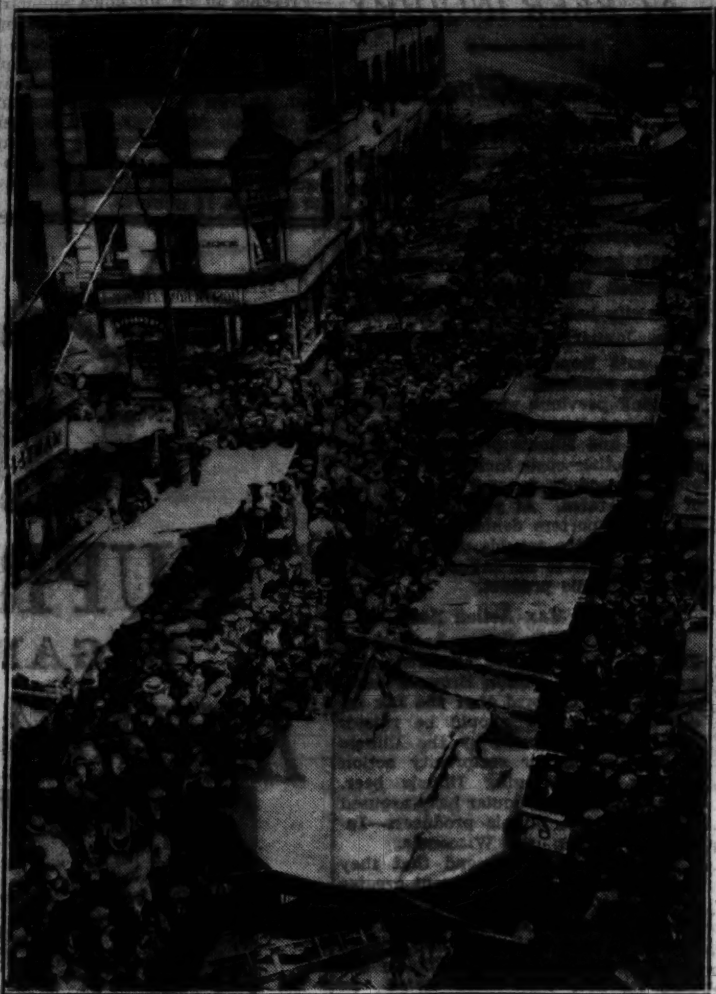

"The question is as to the level at which such stabilization should be effected. Proponents of stabilization do not appreciate the great difficulty at any level at the present time."

Between Two Blocs.

Britain effect stands with the gold bloc countries on one side and the dollar on the other, Chamberlain declared.

"The real difficulty with the situation and one which we ourselves can't control is that the dollar and the franc are not in harmonious relation one with another, and the pound which stands between the two is dear in terms of dollars but not so dear in francs," he added.

Earlier Maj. C. R. Attlee, Laborite, delivered an attack on the Bank of England. In 1930, he said, a large amount of foreign money was deposited here and acceptance houses and foreign bankers loaned $325,000,000 of it to Germany. Then Germany, he continued, could not pay, and the Bank of England, which Attlee said is controlled by merchant bankers, induced joint stock banks to step in and save the gamblers.

Urges Ties Be Severed.

These banks used their depositors' money to get behind the private bank gamblers, Attlee asserted, with the result that $300,000,000 is still tied up and half that probably lost.

The Laborite appealed to the treasury to cut loose from the influence of the Bank of England and strike out on a bold financial policy of his own to finance the restoration of prosperity at home. Chamberlain's reply to that was that now that Britain is off gold, relations between the Bank of England and the treasury must be closer than ever.

SANTA OF MAILS ASKS AID FROM GOOD FELLOWS

Shows a Sample Letter from Little Girl.

BY PHIL MAXWELL.

All of you readers who wish to prove that there is a Santa Claus should read a letter of a little girl which was addressed to the postoffice. Assistant Postmaster John T. McGrath, who has been the official Santa Claus of the postoffice for the last twelve years, asked that Good Fellows come to his aid and help to prove that old St. Nick does live and will remember good little girls and boys at Christmas time. The youngster's letter follows, addressed to Santa Claus:

"I am ———, 9 years old. I have never believed in you, as I hardly ever get any toys. A girl came into our house and she was getting a buggy and a whole lot of other things. She said to us that we children must not be good when Santa Claus doesn't give us anything. So I thought I would tell you about it. My father is a carpenter and has been without work for five years. We children must be good to mother, for she is paralyzed. She has been in a wheel chair for seven years."

Prove There Is a Santa.

Thousands of similar letters, have been received by the Santa Claus Good Fellow Department at 1 South Dearborn. These are your challenge to prove that there is a Santa Claus, who again will make his annual pilgrimage on Christmas morning.

Capt. Benjamin B. Lipner, chairman of Aviation Good Fellows, who, on Monday, will take baskets of food, toys, nuts, and candy to needy families, invites all those identified or interested in the aviation industry to join the pilots in the delivering of baskets. They should get in touch with the Good Fellow Department at 1 South Dearborn street or call Superior 6190 and obtain the name of a family.

The Aviation Good Fellows will meet at 11 o'clock Monday morning at the Chicago airport in the Administration building, and the baskets will be taken to the families in care driven by members of the Women's National and International Aeronautical Association, Inc.

Oates to Represent Behncke.

In the absence of David L. Behncke, president of the All Line Pilots' association, who was injured Thursday night in a plane accident at Western Springs, Jack Oates, headquarters manager of the pilots' organization, will represent Mr. Behncke Monday at the Chicago airport. Mr. Behncke had planned to take an important part in the delivering of the baskets.

Children are invited to attend a fairland Christmas party and toy contest to be held this afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock in the children's playroom at the Stevens hotel. The proceeds (admission is 25 cents) will go to the purchase of 12 Good Fellow baskets. A program will be given by the Chicago Barnum School of Dramatic Art.

ROOSEVELTS' YULE CARD SHOWS THEM SEATED AT FIRESIDE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—The White House Christmas cards this year show President and Mrs. Roosevelt sitting informally by their fireplace.

"A Merry Christmas from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Christmas, 1934," is their simple greeting for their second Yuletide in the White House.

Court Reserves Decision in $300,000 Bull Fighter Suit

Thirty-six members of the Newspaper Carriers' association will be Good Fellows. Joseph Epstein, president of the group, who also is head of the Austin Kiwanis club, said in signing up for the baskets: "More power to Good Fellows. There is nothing that our association has done that has given us as much joy as being Good Fellows. We are used to delivering newspapers, but this time it is going to be Christmas baskets."

For the convenience of Good Fellows, John F. Gillespie, in charge of the Good Fellow department at 1 South Dearborn, announced that the bureau will stay open tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. in order to accommodate those who wish to play Santa Claus. Names of needy families will be given over the telephone and confirmation will be sent through the mail by special delivery to all those asking for them. These names are submitted to THE TRIBUNE through the Christmas clearing house of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies. There still is time left to fill in the adjoining Good Fellow coupon.

TRIBUNE PAYS BONUS TO ALL ITS EMPLOYEES

The Tribune company yesterday paid to all its employees a Christmas bonus of the same percentage of their salaries and wages that has prevailed over the last fifteen years excepting in the years 1930, 1931, and 1932. The full percentage bonus was restored last year. Workers in the organized trades as well as in the editorial, advertising, circulation, and auditing departments shared in the distribution.

COST OF RELIEF DENTAL CARE IS RAISED $200,000

Adoption of New Program Boosts All Fees.

A dental care program, limited mainly by the amount of money which may be available to provide this service for indigents and which increases fees by an estimated $200,000 a year, was unanimously adopted yesterday by the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission. Only four of the ten commission members attended the meeting. The new fees are about 150 per cent higher than those in effect in Cook county previously. There has been no standard downstate fee schedule, and dentists accepting relief "clients" as patients—30 per cent of all dentists do—have been charging prices fixed by themselves.

General Increase in Fees. Typical services, showing the increase, with former fees quoted first, are: Copper cement or amalgam fillings, 25 cents, increased to $1; one surface fillings, 60 cents, increased to $1.50; two surface, 80 cents, increased to $2; three surface, $1, increased to $2.50; synthetic porcelain filling, 75 cents, increased to $2; single film X-rays, 25 cents, increased to $1; full mouth X-ray, $1.25, increased to $4; single extraction, 50 cents, increased to $1; dentures, upper and lower, each $7.75, increased to $20.

There was no mention of the increase in fees at the meeting, although figures were presented to prove that the new fees still are lower than those paid by relief administrations in other states. The plan was drafted by a permanent advisory committee composed of Dr. F. J. Hurdstone, Dr. Emil A. Anderson, Dr. D. M. Galle Sr., all of Chicago, and Dr. J. C. Waddell of East St. Louis. The charge had been made at previous commission meetings that this committee might be expected to favor members of so-called "organized dentistry," since all of the members belong either to the Chicago Dental society or the Illinois State Dental society. In Illinois are members of these societies.

Point Is Emphasized. In this connection the following sections of the plan were pointed out: "Advisory committees for dental service shall be organized in counties by the Illinois State Dental society through nominations made by its local components." "Referrals of patients for dental service shall be to legally qualified dentists taken from a list compiled and maintained by county dental advisory committees, which committees shall also supervise the method of selecting dentists in cases where no preference by the patient is indicated."

Omar H. Wright of Belvidere, member of the relief commission, expressed the fear that the program would cost the taxpayers untold sums unless strict control were maintained of the amount of work done for the state's million relief "clients." He was assured that only "emergency" services would be performed. However, after the meeting Bernard Roloff, director of the program outside of Cook county, admitted that the trend is away from the system of employing special examiners to specify what services might be given by dentists in each case.

Stand on Birth Control Policy. The relief commission unanimously voted not to change its policy in the matter of birth control, which holds that case workers may not direct relief "clients" to contraception clinics even if asked for such information. A week ago the commission was requested by several interested organizations to "fall in line with enlightened public opinion on the subject. It was said that the birth rate among relief families is higher than in any other class."

In taking this action the commission was following the recommendation of Frank Z. Glick, associate executive secretary, and Elmer E. Doan, director of social service, who stated in part: "The commission has not nor does it seem within its clear authority that it should endeavor to modify the basic economic forces to which unemployment might be traced."

Mrs. Betty Machlan, 26 years old, 957 North Oakley avenue, went into court with her troubles and told the judge that when she tried to cheer her husband, Chester, 32 years old, while he was blue he replied by beating and choking her. So yesterday on the plea of her lawyer, Norman Becker, Circuit Judge Walter J. La Buy gave her a divorce decree and custody of a daughter, Norma Lee, 18 months old.

SLAYER OF GIRL QUIZZED ON 4TH CHILD'S KILLING

Near Scene of Murder of Boy, 7.

New York, Dec. 21.—(Special.)—Assigned in Homicide court and surrendered to Westchester county for trial on a charge of slaying 10-year-old Grace Budd in 1928, Albert H. Fish, 65 year old house painter, today was questioned concerning a fourth child murder with which police have sought to link him.

The questioning followed identification of Fish as a man seen in the neighborhood where Francis McDonnell, 7-year old son of a New York policeman, was strangled near Port Richmond in July, 1924. Fish admitted having been in the neighborhood, detectives said, but denied knowledge of the murder, as he had done in two other cases with which police sought to connect him. These were the disappearance of William Gaffney, 4 years old, from his home in Brooklyn in 1927, and the finding of the skeleton of a child as yet unidentified, last June at Darien, Conn.

In these cases also Fish admitted having been in the vicinity, but insisted his only crime was the murder of the Budd girl, whom he took from her home in Manhattan. He killed her to satisfy "a blood lust," according to his confession.

Links Fish with Case. Following arraignment Fish was taken by automobile to Westchester county penitentiary at East View, N. Y., to await trial on the Budd indictment, charging first degree murder. Hans Kiet of Port Richmond was the witness who linked Fish with the McDonnell case. Kiet viewed Fish in the detention pen of the court, and declared "That is the man I chased out of my barn at the time of that case."

GIRL AND ROBBER PAL TRY HOLDUP AT WRONG TIME

Holding up a cab driver shortly before midnight at 8th and Carpenter streets was a lark to Miss Mary McCarthy, 20 years old, and her companion, Fred Minnick, 25 years old, 5249 South Union avenue. But the time and place, as it turned out later, were unpropitious.

Having taken $2 and his cab and cap from the driver, Joseph Tomlinson of 8374 Birkoff avenue, the pair drove away. Tomlinson, seeing a car standing in front of 6723 South Carpenter street, ran up and asked for aid.

"Will you follow that cab until we come to a policeman?" he asked. "I've been robbed."

In the automobile was Sergt. William Lawler and coming out of the house was Sergt. James Sullivan. They were just getting ready to go to work at the detective bureau. With Tomlinson they pursued the cab to 66th and Minnick had the driver's cap, a pistol, and the $2. Miss McCarthy refused to give the police her home address.

ILLINOIS RELIEF INQUIRY PLEA IS CARRIED TO U. S.

State Is Criticized for Its Failure to Act.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—Since the special committee named to investigate the disposition and handling of relief funds has not made an investigation downstate, Maurice O. Kalarhar, state representative from Bloomington, carried the matter to the federal government today.

Mr. Kalarhar wrote a letter to Harry L. Hopkins, head of the Federal Emergency Relief administration suggesting that the federal government "do some investigating."

"It is the taxpayers' money that is being spent," he said today. "I've done everything I can to get the state committee to function, and they haven't budged except to hold one meeting in Chicago."

"If there is any corruption downstate like there was in Chicago the federal government would want to know it, for it is federal money."

Introduced Inquiry Bill. On Oct. 4 of last year Representative Kalarhar introduced the bill for creation of the commission to investigate the expenditures of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

In another portion of his letter to Hopkins was this statement: "You are sending thousands and thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money into this state, turning it over to Horner and his headquarters in Chicago, and in all this time there has never been any investigation of any of the stations."

Turning to another relief subject, Representative Kalarhar said that both the state and individual relief client would benefit if there were a change in the rules regarding allowing clients to work.

Snow Employment, Cited. "As it is now, a relief client is removed from the rolls if he gets work. Yesterday there was a snow, but no relief people wanted to work. Why? Because they knew the job would amount only to a little money and that if they were caught working they would be taken off the relief list."

"I suggest that each client be permitted to take any work he can get, and then report the amount that he made to the relief office and let the relief officials deduct that amount from his monthly allowance. The man would not jeopardize himself and his family by being taken off the rolls and the relief office will make quite a saving."

Orders Relief Investigation. Springfield, Ill., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—Gov. Henry Horner today ordered an investigation of distribution of relief funds in Alexander county, the only county in the state where more than 50 per cent of the population—50.48 per cent—is on the relief rolls.

The county's relief administrator, Miss Grace Powers, has been ordered to supply the names of all on relief rolls, names and salaries of relief employees, names of firms from which relief purchases are made, and amounts spent.

FIND CHARGES UNFOUNDED. The Federal Emergency Relief administration found no grounds for charges that James E. McVea, Johnson county relief administrator, used his office for political purposes. It was announced yesterday by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

At a hearing held a week ago Congressman Claude Parsons and others charged that McVea was administering relief in Johnson county with an eye on the political faith of applicants. Following the hearing evidence in the case was submitted to the federal body by the state relief administration. Howard O. Hunter, regional field representative of the federal administration, exonerated McVea. In a communication sent to the Illinois administration.

CHURCH CHARITY LEAGUE ELECTS; AWAITS CHARTER

Plan Clearing House for Activities.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS. With officers elected yesterday, the only step needed to complete the organization of the Associated Church Charities of Chicago is the granting of a state charter. The election was held at a meeting of the charities' board at the Hamilton club. The board was elected Dec. 10.

Frank J. Loesch, who is in charge of the legal phases of the new organization reported at yesterday's meeting that progress toward a charter has been made.

Dr. Brown Is President. The Rev. Dr. Henry Seymour Brown, head of the Presbyterian extension board, was elected president of the new charities. Other officers are the Rev. Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church; Dr. Robert H. Lawrence, a physician representing the Episcopal church; the Rev. Dr. C. S. Laidman of the Congregational union; and Otto Sauerman of the Evangelical Lutheran Missouri synod.

The charities represent the widest cooperation yet attained among denominations of Chicago, and the new organization is the first in which various branches of the Lutheran communion have joined with other denominations in a specific activity.

Charity Clearing House. The new organization has been set to form a general clearing house for all religious and semi-religious charities not included among those cooperating with the Catholic and Jewish charities. The American Red Cross, the United Charities, and the Salvation Army also are not members of the new organization. The Associated Church Charities also will seek close coordination of work among its member agencies, leaders state.

The general committee of the new charities is composed of the entire membership of the trustees of the Chicago Church Federation in addition to two representatives from each of the four denominations not included in the federation.

BULLET VICTIM LEFT IN HALL OF DOCTOR'S HOME

Answering a ring of his doorbell early today Dr. Roy H. Cox, 2635 Peterson avenue, found a man, who had been shot in the left eye, lying unconscious in the outer hallway. The person or persons who left him there had fled.

Dr. Cox summoned the Summerdale police and the wounded man was taken to the Swedish Covenant hospital. There he revived sufficiently to say that his name was Jack Donohue, who was unable or unwilling to tell how he came to be wounded.

Donohue is about 35 years old. He was well dressed, but there was only 9 cents in his pockets and he carried no letters or other papers to indicate his identity. Physicians said the bullet which destroyed his eye emerged at the temple and that he had a fair chance of recovery. His fingerprints revealed that he is John Donohue, who was sent to Joliet penitentiary in 1922 for robbery within gun. He was paroled early this year.

4 KILLED, MANY HURT IN BRITISH 'CHRISTMAS FOG'

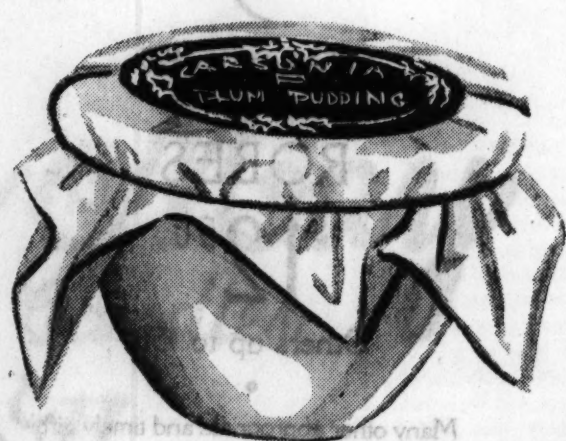

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] LONDON, Dec. 21.—Four persons were killed and many injured in traffic accidents tonight as a dense fog blanketed England. Hundreds of automobiles and trucks loaded with Christmas cargoes were stranded, one small ship sank, but without loss of life, and trains fell hours behind schedules. Thousands of Christmas shoppers and theatergoers in London won't be home until morning.

The fog was particularly dense on arterial roads and railways leading from London.

HUEY LONG RAPS DR. E. EMBREE OF ROSENWALD FUND

Outburst Is Caused by University Rating.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 21.—(Special.)—An attack upon Dr. Edwin R. Embree of Chicago, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund, because of his denial of statements accredited to him by President James Monroe Smith of Louisiana State university, was made today by Senator Huey P. Long.

Dr. Embree, in a statement issued Wednesday, declared that Dr. Smith was "completely in error" in quoting him as saying that Louisiana State university "is about to be included in the first twelve universities of the country" or "the first twenty of the world."

Long, Issue Statement. Senator Long, in his statement says "everybody knows what has happened to the dear brother [Dr. Embree], but it is too bad that he had to exhibit to the world that his integrity was no deeper."

"He has styled himself common. We are teaching in all Louisiana institutions that truth, honor, gratitude, loyalty and service to humanity are to be adhered to and double crossing and selling your soul is to be deplored."

Quotes from Newspaper. "Now, it is too bad that Dr. Embree has been used by his guardians in this section of the state, who are members of the Rosenwald fund board, to put himself in such a bad light, because in the Baton Rouge State Times of Wednesday, March 14, 1934, it gives Dr. Embree's official statement and quotes him as follows:

"At the moment your university is the most promising in this section. It has grown very fast and it has good leaders and professors. From an unknown place 12 years ago it has risen to be included in the nationally known universities. If the state will stand by Louisiana State university, it will ever strive to come to be included in the first 12 or 15 universities of the United States, which means inclusion of the first 20 universities of the world."

"Now the dear doctor has had to swallow his words."

The Long-controlled Louisiana public service commission today ordered George Montague, father of Sam Montague, Louisiana state university student recently expelled for protesting the Kingfisher's censorship of the school newspaper, to stop using the highways for his motor truck service.

OUT OF STATE BREWERS HEARD AT BEER INQUIRY

Deny Taxes Give Them Advantage.

The committee of the Illinois legislature investigating the cost of beer yesterday heard out of state brewers and the importers and distributors of out of state beer tell their views on taxes and prices. The committee, which met in the city hall, will present its report to the January session of the legislature, said Representative William J. Connors, chairman.

During previous meetings the committee has listened to complaints of Chicago and Illinois brewers that the tax and other costs incidental to their business unduly favored the brewers of other states. At yesterday's meeting the importers denied this, declaring that all the trouble of the Illinois brewer is due to his failure to charge enough for his product.

Reciprocal Tax Action Sought. Speaking for the Illinois brewers on Tuesday, F. J. Watzel, administrative secretary of the Illinois Brewers' association, had charged that the tax on out of state beer should be raised. Other demands made by the Illinois brewers called for reciprocity action against states taxing Illinois beer.

Illinois brewers contend that they are operating at a 30 per cent greater labor cost than brewers in adjacent states, and that those brewers are permitted to ship their beer into Illinois much more cheaply than Illinois can ship its beer into those states. In Illinois a tax of 62 cents a barrel is paid while in nearby states the tax runs between one and two dollars a barrel. In addition, warehouse fees, road taxes and other costs, not assessed in Illinois against importers, are assessed in those states.

Yesterday importers contended that all distributors of out of state beer charge higher prices in proportion than are charged on Illinois beer. While many Illinois brewers are charging from $11 to $15 a barrel, practically all imported beer sells for $15 to $17 a barrel, it was said.

Warn of Tariff Battles. The importers contend that additional taxes would only be passed on to the consumer, already overburdened, they declared, with his tax load. They further charged that retaliatory measures would only cause a tariff battle between states.

It was brought out at the meeting that only one other state assesses taxes as low as that of Illinois. Both California and Illinois tax beer 62 cents a barrel. The tax ranges up to $5 in other states. The meeting also went on record against outside electric signs. Many of the suggestions from both meetings will be incorporated in the amended liquor act to come before the next session of the legislature.

PREDICTS 12 HOUR HOPS ACROSS U.S. IN STRATOSPHERE

Cord Corporation Head Tells of New Motor.

Stratosphere, twin motor transport airplanes flying from New York to Los Angeles in twelve hours and carrying twenty passengers will be a reality within two years.

This prediction was made yesterday by L. E. Manning, president of the Cord corporation, who revealed that Cord interests have developed engines of more than 1,000 horsepower, which will give the planes a cruising speed of 280 miles an hour and a top speed of 325 miles.

The engine, said to be the first of its type developed on a large scale, is a radical departure from the present radial type of motor. It will be supercharged to allow operation at high altitudes and cylinders will be in-line, similar to an automobile power plant.

Heated Air in Cabins.

It is planned to fly the planes in altitudes of 18,000 to 25,000 feet which also will require supercharging the air in the cabin.

Mr. Manning also predicted all first class mail will be carried by plane within five years and that business men who find time a premium will use planes exclusively.

"We now are past the joy riding stage," he said. "With the development of fast, commodious ships, which will allow the passenger to board a plane in New York at 10 o'clock at night, enjoy a comfortable sleep in a berth, and arrive in Los Angeles twelve hours later, flying is bound to win general patronage."

Franklin Building in Europe.

He paid high tribute to airplane development in this country but deplored America's lack of parity in air strength with Europe's nations. Manning has just returned from an extensive trip through Europe studying airplane conditions. He said leading nations there are engaged in a frantic race to see who can build the most ships in the shortest time, most of which are for military and not commercial use.

"Unless this country wakes up and launches immediately a large aircraft production program of both military and commercial planes, to place us on a par with any old world power, this nation will be helplessly behind and dangerously vulnerable," he asserted.

"Air parity as well as naval parity is stirring up much excitement in Europe. We have naval parity but are a long way behind in military planes and trained personnel."

Push Training Program.

"Europe recognizes that her borders are only as strong as her air forces and each country is pouring huge sums into all branches of aviation. A huge personnel training program is keeping pace with the manufacture of planes. Production is great in each country that I visited than in all of the United States."

To bring this country's military and commercial forces to a world parity a program of building 5,000 planes must be started immediately, Manning believes. He said we now have less than 1,000. Such a program would cost a billion dollars, he estimates, but 75 per cent of this sum would go to labor in several hundred industries providing work for half a million men.

Manning insisted he is not an alarmist but he believes if the people of the United States realized how far advanced other nations are in air defense immediate action would be taken to place this country in the lead. Oceans on either side of us offer no security any longer as has been proved by the Balbo and other recent flights, he declared.

KINGSFORD-SMITH HALTS FLIGHT AT KANSAS CITY, MO.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, regular 8 hours 15 minutes for a flight from Burbank, Cal., to Kansas City, landed here late today with a laugh for reports that he was seeking a transcontinental speed record.

With him in the monoplane Southern Cross was H. E. Walker, 65 year old California rancher making his first trip in the air to reach the bedside of a brother, William G. Walker of Covington, Ky., who is seriously ill in Cincinnati.

"I don't know where they got the speed idea," Sir Charles said. "I'm just taking Mr. Walker back to see his brother."

Faced by fog and storm conditions in a radius of 100 miles about Kansas City, the Australian trans-Pacific flyer decided to remain here over night.

The sandy haired Australian said he planned to return to California at once after reaching Cincinnati.

"As for the speed attempt, I've often thought I should like to try it, with the proper equipment, of course. Perhaps sometime I shall."

Col. Roscoe Turner holds the present west to east transcontinental record of 10 hours 2 minutes 51 seconds.

City Receives $1,400,000 in Taxes from County

City Controller Upham announced yesterday that the county treasurer had turned over $1,400,000 to the city from the first collection of 1933 taxes. At the same time $400,000 in 1932 taxes was given to the city. The cash will go toward the redemption of tax anticipation warrants outstanding against the levies for the two years, the controller said.

REGRETS AIRPORT BLOCKING, STILL HOPES FOR PLAN

Landis Sees Chance for Future.

Maj. Reed G. Landis, war ace and aviation expert who since 1919 has worked for a lake front airport, expressed disappointment but no discouragement yesterday over indications that the application for a PWA loan for the project will not be approved at Washington.

Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes was quoted in dispatches as saying he does not favor the project because he understands it has not been approved by a special committee.

Meanwhile an effort was made to place the responsibility for blocking the project, which had been endorsed long ago by the war department and the Chicago plan commission, as well as other organizations which studied the plans.

Three Silent on Views.

All three committee members who were appointed by Mr. Ickes refused to disclose how they stood on the matter. The other two members, appointed by Mayor Kelly, are known to be in favor of the airport.

"Of course, it was particularly disappointing to have a Chicago citizen [Ickes] delay still further the obvious and essential development of a lake front airport which would place the city abreast of progress in aviation," Maj. Landis said.

"All who have impartially studied the situation must be of the conviction that such a landing field is important not only to Chicago, but to the rest of the country as well, since this city is the natural transportation center."

"Wonderful Opportunity" for City.

"The present plan, which is the result of 10 years of thorough study, offers a more economical and practical solution to the landing field problem than any other. Chicago has a wonderful opportunity."

"But we can all remember this—Chicago has had other setbacks in the past, and has always continued to fight for what it had to have. I am sure this will be true in the present situation."

He also mentioned the fact that many thousands of dollars would be saved yearly by reducing the run of mail trucks and passenger cars from eight to two miles, between the airport and the loop.

The three committee members who did not reveal their views on the project were F. J. C. Dresser, representative of the PWA, who is chairman; Henry P. Chandler, and Kellogg Fairbank, attorneys.

Still Working, Says Chairman.

"I'm only a member of the committee," said Chairman Dresser. "We haven't completed our studies yet nor have we completed our report. I went into this thing with an open mind."

"Inasmuch as I am a member of the committee, I don't think I should express my opinion at this time," said Mr. Chandler. "Our report is not ready."

"I can't state my personal views because I am a member of the committee," said Mr. Fairbank.

Merrill C. Meigs, the fourth member, frankly said he has always been in favor of the lake front development. The fifth member, John Wentworth, architect, also known to be on the minority side, was out of the city yesterday.

Faced by fog and storm conditions in a radius of 100 miles about Kansas City, the Australian trans-Pacific flyer decided to remain here over night.

The sandy haired Australian said he planned to return to California at once after reaching Cincinnati.

"As for the speed attempt, I've often thought I should like to try it, with the proper equipment, of course. Perhaps sometime I shall."

RATIFY PETRILLO APPOINTMENT TO NEW PARK BOARD

$45,118,065 Budget Is Given to Council.

Mayor Kelly's appointment of James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, as the fifth member of the new Chicago park district board was unanimously approved by the city council at its meeting yesterday. The board is now complete. Robert J. Dunham is president, and the other members are Martin H. Kennedy, Harry Joseph, and Stephen I. Witmanski.

Petrillo was appointed to the park post to succeed John R. Nash, assistant to the mayor, a temporary appointee.

The union head was for eighteen months a west park commissioner and consistently voted for economy measures. His appointment had been urged by labor leaders, among them William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Receive $45,118,065 Budget.

The aldermen also received the 1935 budget, which sets up appropriations of $45,118,065 for the corporate operating fund, on an estimated revenue of $45,121,742.

Ald. J. M. Arvey (24th), chairman of the council finance committee, who presented the budget, pointed out that the new budget is balanced, with an excess of $3,667 in income over expenditures. Of the revenue, it was estimated that $27,336,742 net will be derived from taxes and $17,885,000 additional will come from licenses, fees, and miscellaneous revenue.

After the council deferred the budget and ordered its publication Ald. Arvey announced that a public hearing on it would be held in the council chambers Jan. 2. He said plans called for its passage in substantially its present form Jan. 4.

Ask HOLC to Resume Loans.

A resolution asking HOLC officials to rescind their recent order discontinuing federal loans on homes, offered by Mayor Kelly, was passed. The mayor asserted that in Chicago alone there are 15,000 home owners, who owe an average of $4,500 each on their buildings, who are threatened with foreclosure unless federal loans are resumed. The resumption would return $60,000,000 to circulation, the mayor said.

Under a resolution offered by Ald. John A. Massen (48th) and passed, the council committee on police and municipal institutions is to be asked to study a plan for coordinating police of the city and the park districts.

Ask Driver License Laws.

Another resolution presented by Massen, calling upon the legislature for drivers' license and financial responsibility laws for motorists, similar to those of other states, was referred to the traffic committee.

Those who aided in Mayor Kelly's Christmas benefit program at the Chicago Stadium last Wednesday were thanked in a resolution introduced by Ald. James P. Rostenkowski (32d) and passed.

Yesterday's meeting closed on a holiday note when the aldermen by acclamation adopted a resolution wishing Mayor Kelly a merry Christmas. The mayor fervently returned the greeting.

Miss Earhart Off Today to Hawaii; MAY FLY BACK

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—(Special)—Amelia Earhart, tonight completed preparations to sail tomorrow on the Lusitania for Honolulu, accompanied by her husband, George Palmer Putnam, and her specially tuned Vega monoplane.

She plans to fly back from Honolulu to Oakland, according to statements at the airport where she has been tuning her ship under supervision of Paul Mantz, pilot and navigator. Miss Earhart herself refused to comment on her trans-Pacific flight plans.

The Pratt-Whitney motor which carried her to Europe was in the ship, with a controllable pitch propeller added. The fuselage of the craft is the same as the original trans-Atlantic high wing Vega, now in the Franklin Institute museum, Philadelphia.

Capt. and Mrs. Mantz, close friends of the Putnams, also are making the trip to the island. It is expected Mantz will fly back with Miss Earhart.

Miss Earhart is to lecture on aviation at the University of Hawaii.

Bandit Executed in Spain; 1st Under New Army Code

BARCELONA, Spain, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The first execution under Spain's new, amplified military code took place today when the bandit, Andres Aranda, was garroted in the patio of the city jail. It was the first execution in Barcelona since August, 1926.

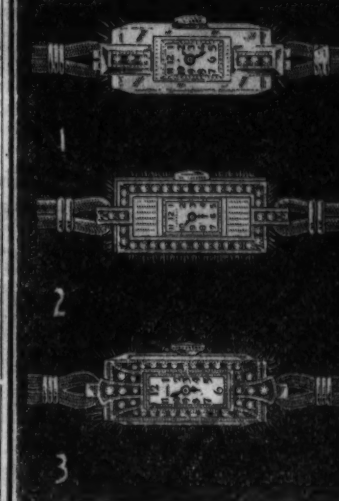

TICKET BROKERS BATTLE NRA ON LICENSE, BOND

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A group of ticket brokers today decided to seek an injunction against enforcement of an NRA code provision for the licensing of all brokers and the posting of a $500 bond.

Fifteen members of the Theater Ticket Brokers' association of greater New York, representing half of the ticket agencies on Broadway, took the action. The licensing and bonding provision took effect Thursday. Producers are barred by the code from allowing tickets to unlicensed brokers. The brokers will continue to sell tickets they have on hand, pending determination of the licensing question.

3 PART PENSION PLAN IS URGED FOR AGED IN U. S.

Economic Security Report Hurried to Roosevelt.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt in a few days will receive the report of the committee on economic security, which for six months has been working on a program embodying unemployment insurance, old age pensions, health protection, and other measures intended to minimize life's hazards for American working men and women.

Secretary of Labor Perkins made this announcement today. A single copy of the report is being rushed to completion for the President's perusal and along with it will be specific recommendations for a legislative program.

Map Three Part Program.
An outline summary of the proposals on unemployment insurance was made public last week. A summary of the proposals on old age security legislation, together with the important issues still left open and which the President will be expected to decide, is given here.

Recommendations fall into three parts:
1. A federal subsidy to states to aid in meeting the cost of old age assistance laws which comply with standards prescribed by federal statute.
2. A national compulsory old age insurance system to cover the major number of the nation's industrial workers, excluding domestic servants and agricultural workers.
3. A national system of voluntary individual old age annuities for persons not covered by the other measures.

These three measures were recommended because it was found no one plan could be expected to cope adequately with the problem.

Must Meet Standards.
For a state to obtain a federal grant its old-age pension laws and administration must meet these standards:

A—The plan shall be state-wide, and administered by subdivisions shall be mandatory on such subdivisions.
B—A state supervisory authority shall be established which will submit to the federal government annual reports of operations of grants.
C—The minimum benefit shall be such that, when added to the income of the recipient, it will provide a reasonable subsistence compatible with decency and health.

D—An old person is entitled to aid under the plan if he is a citizen of the United States, a resident of the state or territory for five years or more and is 65 years old (except that, up to Jan. 1, 1940, plans may be approved in which the age requirement is above 65 but not more than 70 years).

Sets Limit on Property.
The pension recipient must not possess property above $5,000, with insufficient income for reasonable subsistence compatible with decency and health.

On the subject of noncontributory old age pensions, the report states that state action alone cannot be relied on to provide either adequate or universal old age assistance.

It therefore is recommended:
1. That the government offer grants-in-aid to states and territories that provide old age assistance for their needy aged under plans approved by the federal authority responsible for the administration of other forms of public assistance.
2. That the grants-in-aid constitute one-half the expenditures for noninstitutional old age assistance made by any state or territory under a plan approved by this federal authority, provided that not more than $15 a month shall be paid in federal subsidy on account of assistance provided for any aged person.

Experts estimated that by 1930 the subsidies would be approximately one billion $500 million dollars a year, and that states would be required to make at least as large an outlay.

NRA BLUE EAGLE OF ZENITH RADIO FIRM IS REVOKED
The Blue Eagle insignia of the Zenith Radio corporation of Chicago, 3620 Iron street, was revoked yesterday by the National Recovery administration at Washington on the recommendation of the National Labor Relations board.

According to the NRA announcement, the labor board ruled that the corporation had violated section 7A of the recovery act by discharging Herbert Breit, a former employee, for union activities and by refusing to reinstate him after he had made a complaint to the board.

Attorney Irving Herriott, counsel for the corporation, said that the Chicago regional labor board had ruled the corporation was not guilty of discharging Breit in violation of the act.

"Breit was laid off in the ordinary course of business," the lawyer said, "and then he complained that it was because of union activity and made an affidavit that two other employees had told him that was the reason. The employees denied making these statements."

"When the regional board suggested that we reemploy Breit the officers of the corporation said they did not care to take back a man who had made false statements. We do not feel we should be compelled to reemploy him."

Herriott said he would confer within a few days with Commander Eugene MacDonald, president, and other officers of the corporation to determine what, if any, action will be taken to recover the insignia.

HOLLAND SHAKEN BY FATAL CRASH OF FLYING HOTEL

Mourns 7 Victims of Iraq Desert Tragedy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
AMSTERDAM, Holland, Dec. 21.—News of the crash of the great Dutch air liner, Oliver, better known as the Flying Hotel, and the killing of all seven persons on board, struck Holland with the force of a national tragedy today.

Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Juliana joined with the populace in mourning the calamity. Flags went to half staff and radio stations observed silent periods. Large crowds collected to read newspaper bulletins of the crash, which occurred yesterday during a violent thunderstorm over Iraq. Tribute was paid the dead in a parliamentary ceremony.

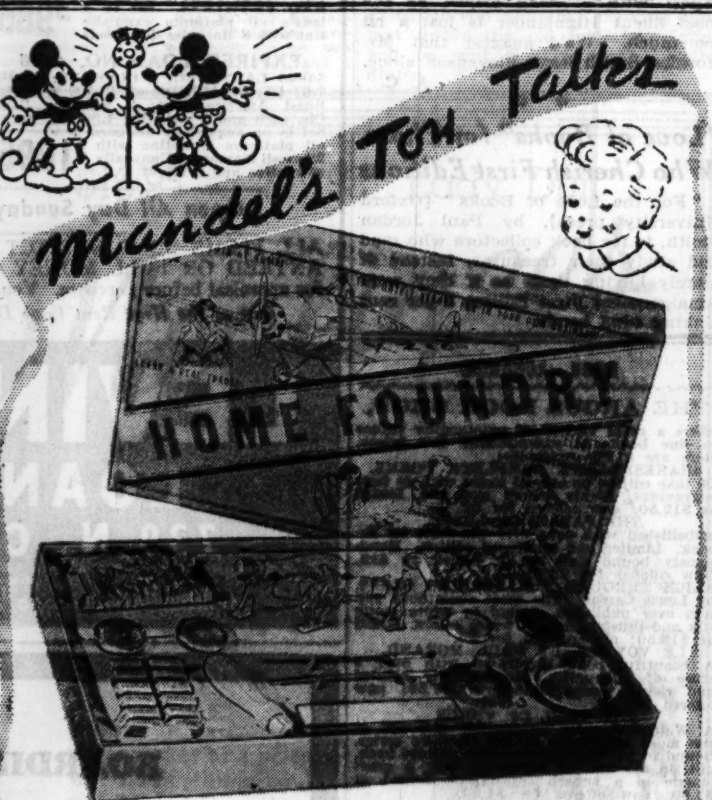

A Nation's Pride.
The entire country had thrilled with pride in the big American-built air liner when it placed second in the speed section of the recent London to Melbourne air derby and won the handicap division of the race.

The plane's pilots in the derby, J. J. Mol and K. D. Farnenter, were given royal honors, and the entire nation regarded the ship as a symbol of Holland's progress in aviation. Its present flight was an attempt to establish a new record for a round trip Amsterdam-Java flight with Christmas mail.

Caught Fire After Crash.
BAGDAD, Iraq, Dec. 21.—[Saturday.]—A salvage party returned today from the scene of the disaster which befell the giant Dutch airplane Oliver convinced the craft caught fire after the crash fatal to its seven occupants and not during the flight in thunderstorm.

The secret of the disaster nevertheless remained in the charred ruins of the "flying hotel," found yesterday, 10 miles south of Rutba Wells, Iraq. Members of the salvage party found the liner upside down, completely wrecked and burned out. The sides appeared to have been smashed before the burst of the flames. Most of the 61,000 letters sent in the Christmas mail were recovered.

MURDER VERDICT RETURNED.
A verdict of "murder by persons unknown" was returned yesterday by the coroner's jury investigating the shooting of George Connel, 32 years old, as he left his car about at 1565 North Halsted street Dec. 15.

PRESIDENT SAYS HE HASN'T READ RECOVERY PLAN

Will Study Program Over Week-End.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The controversy growing out of the recovery platform adopted by business leaders at White Sulphur Springs continued today but it was deftly sidestepped by President Roosevelt. Other administration leaders have blasted the program of industry, but the President asserted at his press conference that he hadn't even read the platform.

Other developments in the latest of the big cooperation movements were:
1. A statement from C. L. Bardo, president of the National Manufacturers' association, declaring that the "hasty commentators" who announced the business program obviously hadn't read it.

2. A statement from the American Federation of Labor saying the number of persons on relief had increased more than 5,000,000 in the last year and that the only remedy was to increase production, putting men back to work. A chance to make profits, the A. F. of L. concluded, is what business is waiting on to start production.

Will Read It over the Week-End.
President Roosevelt said the White Sulphur Springs platform, whereby business would take the leadership in restoring the country to prosperity, was lying in the week-end basket on his desk. He said he always took five or six reports to the White House over the week-end, considered them all carefully and accorded them all fair and impartial treatment.

The casual and noncommittal attitude of the President contrasted sharply with that of Relief Administrator Hopkins who yesterday said the program was the worst thing that could be suggested for America and with PWA Administrator Ickes, who said it didn't appeal to him. Hopkins went on talking about work relief and Ickes about financing power plants that could compete with private industry.

Today Frank McNinch, chairman of the federal power commission, went out with a statement that electric rates throughout the country had to come down, and his commission will soon recommend rigid federal control of all electric companies.

Bardo Explains Opposition.
Mr. Bardo, chief of the manufacturers' association, said the criticism of the White Sulphur Springs platform was based largely on the things it did not recommend. He said the dole was not recommended, but the critics of the recovery platform inferred this method of relief in the clause "the creation of public works for the purpose of providing relief invites waste and definitely defers a balanced budget, which all desire."

Mr. Bardo said the platform did not oppose useful public works not created primarily for relief and did not urge the immediate shutting off of federal relief but a gradual transition to a state and municipal relief platform.

"The facts are that during the transitional period federal relief expenses, excepting CWA, which has been abandoned, could be continued at the rate of the fiscal year 1934 and still balance the budget approximately."

Tribune Roadster Returns from 27-Day Tour in South

BY HAL FOUST.

THE TRIBUNE roadster slid into Chicago last night, completing a 4,720 mile tour of the south in twenty-seven days. All of the information gathered on the trip will be available to the public in The Tribune's touring bureau, at 1 South Dearborn street and on the first floor of Tribune Tower.

The trip was completed on the eve of the heavy travel season to the south. Although the streets of Florida cities were found to be filled with northern automobiles, the big crowds of vacationists do not arrive there until after the Christmas holidays. If the volume of travel continues as it has started, the southern resorts will have more visitors this winter than during the 1933 and 1934 boom.

From Palms to Ice in 2 1/2 Days.
In two and one-half days, with time out for writing, the roadster came from palms and citrus groves of Tampa bay to the snow blanketed north. In twenty-seven hours of leisurely wheeling, the drive came from the boat dock at St. Petersburg, where he had fished striped to the waist, to an icy parking space at the Tribune Tower.

The first snow was seen at Sullivan Ind., about 220 miles from Chicago on U. S. 41. It was just a fine layerwork on lawns in the village. Twenty miles farther north there were occasional patches of snow on the pavement. At Attica, Ind., about 134 miles from Chicago, the concrete was covered with hard packed snow and ice.

Finds Highway Dangerous.
Cars were sliding all over the road. While the roadster was stopped at a garage and equipped with chains, there were two calls for the wrecker to drag machines from ditches.

U. S. 41 was in a dangerous condition for the entire 135 miles. One solid, a large new car with a family headed for Florida, was seen just after it had turned completely over into a ditch. The top held and no one was seriously hurt. Another accident was witnessed from the rear vision mirror. A car trailing The Tribune's roadster whirled on a stretch of smooth ice and needed into a snow bank.

Highway department plows were working on the road but the snow and ice were packed so hard that their efforts were making little impression. It appeared that the rural roads will remain dangerously slippery until there is a thaw.

COURT UPHOLDS NRA BAN ON DEAL FOR HOG SERUM

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan yesterday issued a permanent injunction restraining the Aurora Serum company, manufacturer of hog cholera serum, from fulfilling a contract with the University of Nebraska because of an alleged price violation under the National Recovery administration code.

The serum company had contracted to sell 6,000,000 cubic centimeters of anti-hog cholera serum to the University of Nebraska at 27 cents per 100 cubic centimeters. Assistant United States Attorney Austin Hall charged that the serum should be sold to the university as a wholesaler at 24 cents per 100 cubic centimeters.

Judge Sullivan also issued a permanent injunction restraining the Clark-Oak Motors, Inc., an automobile agency, 940 North Clark street, and its president, Joseph Riba, from violating the fair practices provision of the NRA retail motor vehicle code. The decree restrains the firm from selling new cars below factory list price and accepting used cars at more than values fixed by the code.

Writes Story of English Aristocrat as Fortune Teller

"The Amazing Autobiography of a Aristocrat Turned Mountebank" is the allusive, accurate, and alluring headline for one of the fair's unusual offerings, "The Fair of the Fair" by Allingham [Stokes]. According to the subtitle this is "the true history of a young man's adventures as a fortune teller, graffer, knocker-worker, and mounted pitcher on the market place and in the streets of a modern but still romantic England."

To understand that subtitle, however, one must know that the vernacular of the English country fair doesn't mean just what the Yankee Americans would think of as "stand," "graffer" means "one who works a line in a fair or market as a fortune teller, mock auctioneer, etc.,"

SAAR RECEIVES LEAGUE'S ARMY IN STONY SILENCE

10,000 Watch Parade of Italian Grenadiers.

SAARBRUECKEN, The Saar, Dec. 21.—(AP)—While 10,000 persons watched in deep silence, the league of nations' army staged its first parade here today.

A battalion of Italian grenadiers, smart in olive drab uniforms with red facings, marched through the city, its band playing snappy martial tunes. The thud of soldiers' boots and the music were the only sounds, however. The few words spoken among the crowd were in whispers.

Officials Are Pleased.

Even though there was little enthusiasm for the soldiers, the league authorities governing the Saar until it votes Jan. 13 as to its future national allegiance were pleased, because they had feared Nazi enthusiasts might utter hostile cries.

With 500 British and Italian soldiers already here, the rest of the league's army of 3,000 is expected to reach the basin tomorrow and Sunday.

1,300 Tommies in France.

CALAIS, France, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Thirteen hundred officers and men, the main body of Great Britain's Saar contingent, landed at Calais this afternoon.

They were to leave in two special trains just before midnight for Saarbruecken, traveling all night in order to reach there in the early morning when few Saarlanders would be about.

The senior officers had sleeping cars provided for them, but the Tommies were to travel in third class day coaches.

Visitors Due from America Today.

BREMEN, Germany, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Great preparations have been made for the reception of 352 Saar Germans now living in North America. They will arrive aboard the liner Bremen tomorrow to vote in the Jan. 13 plebiscite.

Similar celebrations will mark the arrival of Saarlanders from South America. They will be feted at Hamburg. Toasts will be exchanged and pledges of "immutable faith in Nazi Germany."

The German government denies it is paying the voters' expenses, alleging they are financed "by private donations."

Under the terms of the treaty of Versailles any person living in the Saar at the time of the signing of the treaty is eligible to vote in the plebiscite, provided he or she is 20 years old.

18 Charged with Treason.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Eighteen persons were arraigned in court here today on charges of preparing treasonable acts and possessing explosives.

Simultaneously the Nazi press announced that a big communist plot had been discovered at Dortmund. Those implicated in the alleged plot were described as operating under various disguises.

The announcements said 29 Berlin residents had been sentenced to imprisonment and hard labor for terms up to 12 months.

SIX SENTENCED FOR 24TH WARD BALLOT FRAUDS

Six Twenty-fourth ward workers in the election of Nov. 8, 1930, were sentenced in the Criminal and County courts yesterday.

Three workers in the Forty-first precinct were ordered to jail by Judge Walter J. Labuy in the Criminal court after a jury had found them guilty of conspiring to make a false canvass.

They are Joseph Brownstein, precinct captain, and Morris Gruffman, his assistant, sentenced to 60 days in the Bridewell, and William Kohen, Republican judge, who was given a one day sentence because he had already served 60 days for contempt of court for permitting the false canvass.

Three former officials of the Twentieth precinct pleaded guilty of having made a false canvass and were sentenced by Judge Wm. J. Knuch of DuPage county, sitting in the County court here. They are Michael Cohen and Harold Kaplan, Democratic judges, both of 3438 West 12th place, who were given 60 day sentences, and Mrs. Alice Golden, 3439 West 12th place, a Republican judge and mother of three small children, who was fined $250.

TOOTHPASTE AND FAGS ARE LOOT IN TWO HIJACKINGS

A cargo of cigars and cigarettes valued at $800 was hijacked from a truck of the Gershuny & Epstein company, 538 Milwaukee avenue, at Irvington avenue and Central street, Evanston, last night.

The driver, Henry Pfeiffer, 1766 North Rockwell street, told the police two men had seized him near the Northwestern university campus and after forcing him to drive a short distance had transferred the tobacco products to an automobile, in which they drove away.

Frank J. Cass, a driver for the Lasham Cartage company, 313 East South Water street, was kidnapped last night by two men while a third drove away with a truck of the company loaded with 250 cases of toothpaste.

The driver was released two hours later at 61st street and Karlov avenue.

JEWISH VICTIM OF U. S. GIRL'S TALK HELD BY NAZIS

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Dr. Fritz Meyer, Jewish physician denounced by the Nazi press on the strength of gossip by Miss Charlotte Emery of Roanoke, Va., was under "protective arrest" today.

It was revealed he had surrendered to the police as soon as the charges that he had told Miss Emery it was "bad taste to study in Germany" were published in Der Angriff, official Nazi organ.

Dr. Meyer denied having made the statements ascribed to him. His wife and daughters are in hiding.

Miss Emery, who appears now to be enjoying the attention she is getting, seems to have recovered from the shock of having endangered the lives of the Meyer family after her Nazi friends assured her that the doctor and his family had fled and that nothing would happen to them.

ROBBED OF RING AND $401.

As Leonard Nelick, 3345 North Damen avenue, a salesman, was parking his automobile at Lincoln and Milwaukee avenues yesterday, he was held up by two men, who robbed him of $401 and a $400 ring.

SOVIET ASSASSIN 13 OTHERS FACE TREASON TRIAL

Police See Kirov Murder as Part of Terror Plot.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Leonid Nicolett, the accused assassin of Sergei Kirov, and 13 other alleged members of an anti-soviet group were handed over to the military collegium of the Supreme court today.

The move marked the end of the police investigation of the assassination of the soviet official Dec. 1 and paved the way for an early trial.

The official report of the inquiry said it had been established that Nicolett killed Kirov by commission of the terrorist underground organization, "Leningrad Center."

The motive of the group, the report said, was to "disorganize the leadership of the soviet government through terrorist acts directed against the chief leaders of the soviet régime and thus gain a change in the present policy in the spirit of the so-called Zinoviev-Trotsky platform."

Revenge Motive Hinted.

The communique indicated that the revenge also played a part in the murder. It reported that Nicolett said in evidence, "the former opposition had its special accounts with Kirov in connection with the struggle he organized against Leningrad oppositionists."

The inquiry established that this anti-soviet group lost hope for the political support of the masses and adopted terror because of the futility of their aims, it was said.

The development came as reports circulated that Gregory Zinoviev, who was named in the official report, and Leo Kamenyev were under arrest for counter-revolutionary activities.

Newspapers charged that the two former leaders of the communist party were implicated in the plot which resulted in the assassination of Kirov. The soviet foreign office, however, refused to comment.

Zinoviev has been twice expelled from the communist party for his opposition tactics. Kamenyev is a brother-in-law of the exiled Leon Trotsky.

Stalin to Try Zinoviev, Kamenyev.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A dispatch from the Warsaw correspondent of the Express said today Gregory Zinoviev and Leo Kamenyev will be tried by a court of five judges, including Josef Stalin, for complicity in the murder of Sergei Kirov in Leningrad Dec. 1.

The dispatch stated the men would be tried also for complicity in the "GPU [secret police] uprising" in Leningrad, and that the death penalty "appears to be a foregone conclusion."

Zinoviev and Kamenyev now have been removed from their homes to Lubyanka prison, the article says, and concludes with the statement that Stalin has decided to ask France to expel Leon Trotsky.

OTTO, CLAIMANT TO THRONE, PLANS TRIP TO AUSTRIA

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Archduke Otto, claimant to the nonexistent Austrian throne, and his mother, former Empress Zita, are making preparations to leave the Château Steenokkerzele in Belgium for the Austrian Tyrol some time in January, it is strongly rumored here.

The information is chiefly credited to Count Zichy, master of ceremonies at Steenokkerzele, who points out that permission has already been given by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria.

Austro-Hungarian monarchists meantime are working hard to get foreign moral and financial support for the legitimist movement to restore the Austrian monarchy. To reinforce and continue the propaganda work done in America heretofore intermittently by the opera star Maria Jeritza and her husband, it is reported that Baron Friedrich von Wiesner, ranking diplomat under the old imperial régime, will be sent shortly to the United States.

CROAT ACCUSED IN ASSASSIN PLOT FREED BY VIENNA

Austria Rejects Demand for Extradition.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

VIENNA, Dec. 21.—Another step in liquidating peacefully the dark story of King Alexander's assassination last October in Marseilles was taken today when the Austrian government finally refused the extradition of Col. Percevic, Croat exile. Percevic, along with Dr. Ante Pavelich, another Croat exile now in Italy, are accused by Jugo-Slavs of being the chief instigators of the conspiracy which resulted in Alexander's death.

Upon the request of France, Percevic was arrested here two months ago and held in an Austrian jail until today. He was charged with having been in direct contact with the came of Janka Putza in Hungary, where Croat exiles allegedly were trained to assassinate the king.

Follows Example of Italy.

In releasing Percevic the Austrian government follows the example of the Italian court which refused to extradite Dr. Pavelich three weeks ago. In both cases the reason given was that extradition could not be granted since the charges are wholly political.

With the extradition of both Pavelich and Percevic refused, the investigation of highburs in the Marseilles assassinations and the plotting of delicate ramifications of the plot have been definitely sidetracked. Much might have been revealed that would have been dangerous to European peace had either been extradited, it is said in Central Europe.

Prisoners to Pay Penalty.

After Austria's decision, together with the league of nations' mild censure of Hungary for harboring the terrorist plotters, the Marseilles tragedy can now be laid to the account of those few Croats directly implicated who were arrested in France and who will pay whatever penalties are exacted.

LITTLE ITALIAN PRINCESS TO BE BAPTIZED TODAY

NAPLES, Italy, Dec. 21.—(AP)—All the royalty and aristocracy of the realm converged on Naples tonight for the baptism tomorrow afternoon of little Princess Maria Pia, first child of Crown Prince Humbert and Crown Princess Marie Jose.

Cardinal Ascalesi of Naples, assisted by 13 bishops, will perform the ceremony in the chapel of the royal palace before an altar of stone and lapis-lazuli centuries old.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helen of Italy, the royal parents and other members of the royal family will be present. Representing Premier Benito Mussolini will be Gen. Emilio de Somo, minister of colonies and participant in the famous Fascist march on Rome. Prince de Ligne, the Belgian ambassador, will represent King Leopold of Belgium, Princess Marie Jose's brother.

The baby, who was informally baptized the day after her birth, Sept. 24, must have the solemn and formal baptism by reason of her royal blood. This has been delayed, however, by King Victor Emmanuel's trip to Italian Somaliland.

NAZIS FIRE PROFESSOR WHO REFUSED TO TAKE HITLER FEALTY OATH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Dr. Karl Barth, famous Swiss theologian and the only official in Germany who dared to refuse to take the oath of allegiance to Chancellor Hitler, was summarily dismissed as professor of theology at Bonn university by the disciplinary court at Cologne today.

The professor also was struck off the pension list. The court granted him a pittance, equivalent to six months' pension.

Dr. Barth declined to take the oath on religious grounds. He said he was prepared to take the unamended civil service oath of fealty. The minister of education refused the professor's request.

NEW JUGO-SLAV CABINET FORMED; 3 CROATS IN IT

BEGRAD, Jugo-Slavia, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A new Jugo-Slav cabinet was formed today under the premiership of Bogoljub Yevitch, close friend of Prince Paul, who heads the regency, but most political observers believed its life would be short.

They pointed to the fact that most of the ministers are little known and not outstanding personalities. Trouble in parliament, with new elections possible, also was predicted because only one member of the senate is included in the list. Three of the fourteen ministers are Croats, one is a Slovene, and one a Moslem. The rest are Serbs.

The downfall of the Uzunovich government followed. The resignation of Yevitch as foreign minister on Dec. 18 in a row over the Hungarian situation.

THREE STRIKES AND OUT.

Since last summer three strikes have been called at the mill of the Hamilton Woolen company in Southbridge, Mass. The directors of the company regard the outlook as hopeless and have voted in favor of liquidating the business. A special meeting of the stockholders for this purpose has been called.

Nearly 700 employees remained at their looms to the end. They were and are willing to work. They do not want to go on relief, but many of them will have to in consequence of the misguided activities of a minority.

Here is as clear an example as the country has had of the destructive influence of communist leadership in American industrial relations. The communists don't care how many factories they close and how many men and women are thrown out of work. Indeed, the more factories they close the better they are pleased, because they think that men and women out of work are the more readily recruited into mobs.

The agitators will pretend, of course, that the dismantling of the mill was part of a great capitalist plot to grind labor into the dust. It is difficult to believe that many of the 670 who have been thrown out of work will be taken in by this kind of nonsense. The plain truth is that the action of the agitators caused the factory to operate at a loss, and only because of the losses is it being closed. The dissolution of the business will save something from the wreckage for the investors, but nothing will be left for the men and women who want to work. They are the principal victims of the communist agitation which was carried on in their name. They have been betrayed, and deliberately betrayed.

CONSTRUCTIVE REGULATION.

As we have studied the reasoning of those who insist that all forms of transportation must be equally regulated by a single commission, it follows along these lines: That as long as railways are required by law to adhere to a published schedule of freight rates they are at the mercy of those forms of transportation that are free to offer inducements to attract traffic. So far so good. The next thought is that either the railways must be freed from regulation or a measure of government interference imposed on truck and boat operators. As the former alternative would breed destructive wars, it is argued that government regulation of the railway type for all transport is inescapable. But does this necessarily follow? Are there not just as many steps between bureaucratic tyranny and uncontrolled competition as between slavery and anarchy? A compromise between these two extremes is the very essence of what we call civilization.

Further, there is but one form of railway transport—the common carrier. On the highways and waterways there are three types, the private, the contract, and the common carrier, their importance and efficiency appearing in the order mentioned. As the railway offers no parallel service to that of the first two groups, it is proposed to exalt the common carrier in all fields by imposing restrictions on private and contract operations using the highways and waterways. Again we question the wisdom. Such a course would clearly regulate the efficient for the benefit of the inefficient, contrary to public interest, which admittedly demands the best transportation at the lowest possible cost. As this Chicago Tribune frequently has argued, the logical step toward this goal enunciated by the coordinator of transportation is to encourage efficiency where it exists and foster it where it is absent. In other words, promote contract carriage on the highways and waterways and introduce it in railway transport.

Perhaps an example would serve best to illustrate the theory. Numerous methods of moving new automobiles and trucks to Chicago have been devised to escape rail transportation. A substantial number seek lake transportation, increasing the journey 150 per cent. Others are coupled and driven in tandem on the highways. Still others are mounted on ingenious truckways of various types designed to meet the vehicle limitations imposed by the states. A further quota is trucked to such ports as Muskegon to move across Lake Michigan by vessel.

It is possibly true that the all-commodity railway box car is not well adapted to this service and blocking is required when flat cars are used. On the other hand, boat transport involves expensive transshipment and the highway is far inferior to the railway right of way in the matter of curvature, gradients, and riding qualities. Let us assume that contracts by rail were permitted. The engineers, who designed the truckways would delight in devising a light weight motor train that could move on the rails. The automobile manufacturer would provide funds and the equipment would be handled by railway labor—a veritable freight Zephyr.

Such situations exist not alone in the motor field but in every line of endeavor the country over. Private and contract carriage owe much, if not all, of their popularity to the opportunity offered for flexibility and the exercise of ingenuity as contrasted with the ponderous and impersonal routine of railway service. Inventiveness will not thrive where it is unrewarded. Every motorist would applaud a member of that fraternity who would wonder how long the railways that he must frequently parallel will survive? A magnificent, fenced light of way with unobstructed entry to every city lies practically idle while he weaves through freight trains along a road over which he feels a certain vague sense of proprietorship because he is conscious that the fuel bill paid at the last filling station included a contribution of 30 per cent for highway taxes.

DILLINGER'S WOODEN GUN.

The use of a wooden imitation of a revolver by John Dillinger in his escape from the Crown Point jail hit the funny bone of the American public and did much to enhance the reputation of that unimpaired individual. We shared the popular amusement without forgetting that it had much to do with the escape. Cold cash and corruption were the weapons Dillinger used so successfully, as we asserted at that time and since. That important fact seems now to have been verified by an agent of Dillinger who speaks from his own knowledge and participated in the arrangement. This evidence has been corroborated by another witness who saw the money pass. Official belittling of this evidence goes not, it is said.

In short, as we have insisted, the Dillinger escape was only another example of the cooperation of crime and corrupt politics, an alliance which must be smashed before we get very far in the control of crime. We have urged the responsible citizenship of Indiana to deal with the corrupt politics which was making a joke of its criminal law and we now hope the disclosure of the methods by which Dillinger was enabled to walk out of an Indiana jail will convince the people of the state and induce them to make the necessary effort to clean up their politics. But the disclosure should carry further afield. The alliance of crime and corrupt politics is everywhere, and, as we have reiterated, is the central objective of the battle against crime. Every community ought to reflect upon the Crown Point incident and realize its bearing upon its own crime problem.

GAS WARFARE.

The fact that the German army surprised its foes with the use of gas and possessed the world's greatest chemical industry justified a good deal of the alarm in Great Britain at the time of the Ypres attack. But it has not justified the continued exaggeration in England of the facts of gas warfare and of its possibilities. There is even less excuse for us, yet we have followed as usual the British footsteps.

We recommend, therefore, to our alarmists the view of a distinguished minority in England which has insisted on examining the realities of gas warfare and its practical possibilities. Prof. Haldane, one of the leading scientists of Great Britain and a veteran of the late war who had been both gassed and wounded, protested some years ago against the perversion of facts and the gross exaggeration of possibilities in the propaganda against chemical warfare, and to his support has now come Dr. Herbert Levinstein, one of the chief experts during the late war, who asserts that the use of chemicals represents an economy of force, material, and life.

Few if any pacifists are disposed to look the actualities of war in the face, but our policy and practice should be based not on the emotions and prejudices of pacifists but upon realities. These realities are available to us if we will take the trouble to be informed. Dr. Levinstein himself cites the experience of the A. E. F., which had 75,000 gas casualties, with a ratio of 14 per cent fatalities. The suffering and death from high explosives were far greater, and, as both Prof. Haldane and Dr. Levinstein have pointed out, chemical warfare represents an advance toward more humane methods, not a retreat. Any soldier, we think, who has had experience or observation of combat would prefer to take his chances with gas rather than with the "razor edged fragmentation" of shell we used to hear about during the war, but the civilian humanitarians who are demanding the prohibition of chemicals will pay no attention to that preference. Both Dr. Levinstein and Prof. Haldane contend that chemical warfare offers a means of substantially reducing suffering and fatality in battle.

The propaganda against it argues on false assumptions and is full of predictions of the wiping out of whole cities with a few drops of chemical not yet discovered. Experts have repeatedly exploded these theories, but the alarmists ignore their testimony. If the latter prevail in this country we shall not only be deprived of a means of defense which our industrial and scientific resources assure us but the sacrifice will not even have an altruistic or humanitarian justification.

Editorial of the Day

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR.

(Rockford Register-Republic.)
Dr. Allan Roy Dufos is taking a vacation in the big cities for the first time since he helped the Dionne quintuplets arrive in a bewildering world. The doctor is on a vacation of three weeks and will address physicians in some of our eastern cities before returning to Callander, Ontario.

"He'll admit that he's had to stoke stoves to warm settlers' cabins enough to sustain the life of patients; that he's had to settle family rows, cook meals, and spank children for his patients in the sparsely settled north where he practices," said an interview in a Toronto paper. "But he says it's all part of the job, and any country doctor does the same things." Dr. Dufos was famous not by a long life of sacrifice and service, but by happening to be present and prepared when an almost unprecedented event took place—the birth of quintuplets. Under adverse circumstances of isolation and poverty he brought to this problem such sound sense and good medical skill as to participate in a feat never before performed—that of keeping alive more than a hundred days all five children.

Just a country doctor who participated in a miracle and heard himself acclaimed, such is Allan Dufos. But he has won remarkably well, disregarding his unexpected fame and attending to his duties modestly and well. Every little community knows such a man, and perhaps they prize him greater cities, obscured by numbers and their own modesty. But they are the strength of humanity.

A LINE OF TYPE OR TWO

How to fit the line, let the quips tell where they may.

THIS GOLDEN GIFT

By Rachel Mack Wilson

Pale Mary with the restlessness of wheat
Held Jesus to her breast. She loosed the scarf
That fell too heavily on down-soft hair.
"See you the light above my hand each time
I touch Him . . . certain now that He has come?"
She freed the mantles stitched in crimson thread
Then serving Joseph for a praying shawl?
Then Mary once again observed His hands.
To her they were as tinted shells from some Far sea that chambered only nautilus.
"Joseph," she said, "His breath comes like the rhythm
Of evening palm beside a desert camp:
His tight-closed eyes . . . are they not like the dawn.
Reluctant to relinquish the still night?
The world seems made but for us three, today.
No altar cloth nor incense rising sweet—
Nor ever-burning light above a shrine,
Nor mustard seed deep in an antique urn
Could add to this a single covenant."

"But look you Joseph! Do I see aright?
The angel that appeared before He came
Has come again. He stands beside
The rod and flail of the threshing floor!
And see you not, beloved? His robe is white . . .
A look of sorrow darkens his bright face:
He brought an olive wreath and branch of palm—
A jar of ointment when he came before—
But now he holds a smoldered tear. He lifts
The scales of Truth . . . broken before the sun!
Fear not, I hold Him close. No harm shall come."

And Mary leaned against the saddlebags
To draw a veil of blue across her breast.
An eager hand lifted the wooden latch
And there before the pair, unheeded,
Stood men of wisdom robed in desert cloth,
Heavy with sand . . . but underneath their cloaks
Mantles of purple like the pomegranate
Protected words. They were suspended from Long, swinging waistcoats, rich with talismans.
One held a box of sandalwood . . . a chest
Of yellowed ivory with a single pearl.
Another . . . jars from Persia filled with myrrh,
And grapes curved upon a golden cup.
Held forward on his palms . . . the last to come Lifted a bowl with herbs of sesame—
Covered with perfume, burning in blue flame.
But Mary saw only the single rose
That suddenly, new-grown, sprung into bloom
Between them and her threadbare garment hem.

The visitors then placed their precious gifts
Upon the bushy Joseph brought to lay
As table for the first Epiphany.
And when they went . . . one to another said:
"Vernacular of silence has a pulse
When veils within the Temple stand apace:
The Cycle of the Seven has accented:
The Builder's Bridge is arching to the west."
He set a seal upon the lips of each . . .
Seared with a scarab, sanctioned with a tear.
He lifted hands in high humility.

The Persian then, far past the crowded inn,
Mounted his camel. Facing east he laughed:
"Think you we've seen the Holy One? Is He
To kindle once again the long lost fire?"
Then the Egyptian spoke: "I came not here
To look upon a master-child. The voice
Proclaimed, through years of waiting, not a god,
But said a prophet should be born to us . . .
A link of love would bind the worlds again."

The doubting one while tying bags of grain
Said: "Not for this shall I surrender peace:
The safe appointed of another dawn
Still holds my pledge of service, for he is Born of a genius . . . heir to a king's estate!
Think you this One has rightful parentage?
Is this the couple promised long ago?"
But the Magian from India, soft of voice,
A russet garment draped about his staff,
Spoke mantras that winged from his slow lips
As though a hermit spoke from some far wood,
The surprise that his heightened vision wore
Was prophecy and answer bound in one.
"Love's law knows naught of parenthood," he said:
"Needs but itself to light the single world.
Each mother's child is brought in virgin birth,
For motherhood is born of purity:
Immaculate. The stream of life is so.
The star which brought us here spoke not of light . . .
For light is of itself a pronouncement.
Nor need we meet in far Jerusalem . . .
Now that the Bringer of the Fruit has come,
The overthrower of illusion's plan,
Siraji Mahaji! Brothers of Destiny!
Makers of legends . . . fable followers!
Siraji Mahaji! The rolling waters crash.
The Cycle of the Seven has accented,
For with this babe is ancient truth reborn.
Love shall be lifted in a golden cup."

The Persian then, and the tall Egyptian,
Walked silently with eyes upon the sun:
And when they knelt upon the shining sands
To dedicate themselves unto the day
The voice of one unseen addressed their minds:
"The quest is ended and the victory won.
A man of truth goes forth from Bethlehem."
But Mary . . . from her couch of tumbled straw
Reached out to Joseph still beside her there;
She whispered to him, softly touched his hand:
"I cannot rest for glory that is mine,
And gratitude now that my arms are filled.
Greater than giving is this golden gift . . .
More than a Son has graced our empty lives.
More than a King shall leave the world His crown . . .
Though brought by wise ones . . . He shall need no gifts,
For a Shepherd stirs among the quiet sheep."

CHILBLAINS.

COMMON word of Shakespeare's was "chill," meaning chilblain. In "Hamlet," we find: "The age is grown so pickled that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his knee." The lesion is a curious and as yet unexplained disorder of circulation. Cold is an exciting cause, but it is difficult to understand why it affects one person and not another under like conditions of exposure. It is pretty largely a condition of childhood, and the preponderance of cases will be borne by those who are under the age of 30. In other words, immunity comes with increasing age. Certain persons, however, who are free from this disorder in their earlier years may be affected in middle life.

Chilblains are characterized by a rapid destruction of small capillaries in the skin, accompanied by the pouring out of cells and fluid from the blood vessels, thus causing swelling. Symptoms usually appear about seven hours after exposure to cold. Occasionally, where there is a quick change in the weather with a rapid rise in temperature, the symptoms disappear spontaneously.

By some writers it has been held that systemic disease may have something to do with the onset. For example, it is nearly twice as common in patients who are afflicted with tuberculosis as in the average of non-tuberculous individuals. Inasmuch as it is a disease of circulation, a higher incidence is encountered in those who possess some abnormality of the blood vessels.

CHURCH AND STATE.

Riverside, Ill., Dec. 18.—The editorial under the caption of "Church and State" was intended, of course (as so many of The Tribune's editorials are), as a scare-all to the many loyal Americans who are earnestly seeking through press and radio to awaken the public to the need for better social and economic conditions.

The quality of thought, so evident in this editorial, is the same sort that brought an end to the political prestige of the Republican party and made that once great party a fit subject for complete reorganization; it is the old time ultra conservatism!

In a period of complete change of thought, feelings, sentiments and ideals, such as now confronts us, and with dire misery and distress on all sides, there is neither time nor place for any consideration of that stupid, "died in the wool" conservatism.

Our churches, Protestant, Catholic, and Jew, who know the social conditions far better than does the capitalist press, have as much right to a free discussion and expression of their views upon social, economic, and religious questions as has the biased, party bound press!

It is a known fact, and an ominous one, that financial interests have sought to silence our religious leaders who are striving to enlighten the people with truthful reports of the social and economic trends of the times.

Tell us how more of these truthful statements and less press propaganda! None of us is looking for a complete overthrow of the present economic system, but we all earnestly expect and hope for a regulated capitalist system which will make for greater security for all the people.

ANNA J. ROBERTS.

"CHOO CHOO," SAID THE FINCH.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—A writer in your column claims that birds do not need to be taught to sing, but sing their own songs naturally.

We picked up a baby house finch after a storm in Denver. As it was too young to set free we had to bring it with us home to Chicago. The house finch has a very sweet song, but there were none of its associates around, so it never heard its own song.

We fed and cared for the L. C. tracks and it sang exactly like a locomotive.

MARY D. REID.

OLDSTERS IN COLLEGE.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—There seems to be a popular feeling that it is admirable in 70 year old men to attend college classes—breeches, copybook, and all. It is merely a symptom of approaching senility. If they must learn a thing, may they not be taught to teach themselves, to guide themselves through their studies?

That my remarks are just is evident from present day trends in university pedagogy. Attending classes is becoming only a formality. A student is expected to teach himself, to recognize the problems confronting him, and to solve them by independent thought and action.

Winifred Wheeler Is Bride

(Tribune Photo.)

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Langenberg McIntyre.

Miss Wheeler, H.L. McIntyre Are Married

Church Is Decorated in Green for Ceremony.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Chrysostom's church Miss Winifred Wheeler, daughter of Mrs. Robert Campbell Wheeler, and Henry L. McIntyre, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. McIntyre of St. Louis, repeated their wedding vows after the Rev. Dudley Stark. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, 1447 Astor street.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Thayer Wheeler, looked radiant in a simple gown of white satin made with long sleeves and train, and with quilting at the edge of the skirt and on the broad flat collar. A white tulle veil billowed back from her head, and she carried gardenias.

Her seven attendants were gowned alike in chaste satin with long sleeves and mink collars. Mink tails trimmed their tiny satin hats, and bands of the fur finished their champagne muffs. They were Miss Virginia Waller, a cousin of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Isabel Gordon, Miss Louise Brewer, Miss Jean Stevens, Miss Anne Small, Miss Betty Smith, and Miss Mary Jean Curtis of Grand Rapids, Mich., as bridesmaids.

Arthur Calfee of St. Louis served Mr. McIntyre as best man, and ushering were the bridegroom's cousins, Oliver and Harry Langenberg Jr., Goodwin Johnston, John Disbrow, Charles Bloomfield, Hugh McWilliams, Theodore Chapman, and David Richardson.

The church was decorated effectively and differently in greens with two standards of white flowers at the altar, which was lighted by candles. A few minutes after the ceremony the receiving line formed in the living room of Mrs. Wheeler's handsome house. Mrs. Wheeler, at the head of the line, was wearing a gown of green velvet with a matching hat. Mr. McIntyre and his bride left for a wedding trip east. On their return they will be at home at 211 East Chestnut street.

Only a dozen intimate friends witnessed the wedding yesterday afternoon of Howard Ketting, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ketting of Westport, Conn., and Miss Prudence Emerson Brown, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Porter Emerson Brown, also of Westport. The service was read at 4:30 o'clock in the apartment of Mr. Ketting's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ogden Ketting, at 70 Cedar street.

Society Faces 2 Days Filled with Events

Harriet Fentress Engaged to Bruce Benson.

BY JUDITH CASS.

WEDDINGS, debuts, the Princeton Triangle club show, the gala final performance of the Chicago Grand Opera company, and dozens of smaller affairs will keep society in almost perpetual motion during the next two days. How any one will find a moment in which to wrap Christmas gifts, much less purchase them if he or she has left any shopping until these last days, is a mystery, for every one's engagement pad is filled with notations of pleasant social things to do that will make the days—and the nights—all too short.

In spite of all the week-end activities, however, our most interesting news this morning is an engagement announcement, that of Miss Harriet Fentress to Bruce Benson. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress of Fenbrook, Hubbard Woods, are announcing it just as she arrives at home for her Christmas holiday from Vassar college. For about two dozen years the Fentress and Benson families—he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Benson—have been north shore neighbors and just about ever since they were children Bruce Benson has been one of the special beaux of the Fentress' youngest daughter.

Miss Fentress Junior at Vassar.

Miss Fentress now is in her junior year at Vassar. Before she went east a year ago last fall she was presented to society by her parents at a garden tea at Fenbrook. The party also was the debut of Miss Barbara Hobart, the Ralph Hobart's daughter, and there was a supper dance afterwards for the two buds. Before going to Vassar Miss Fentress studied at Miss Wheeler's in Providence, R. I. and at the North Shore Country Day school.

Mr. Benson, who was graduated from the University of Chicago last June was prepared for college at Miss Harris' school and the North Shore Country Day school. No date has been set for the wedding.

With the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Burwell Dodd (Mary Fentress), whose home is in Hartford, Conn., all of the Fentress children will be at Fenbrook on Christmas day. Besides Miss Harriet there will be Mrs. Emily Fentress Stocking, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress Jr. (the former Sarah Wood), Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Fentress (the former Celeste Pope), and Paul Fentress.

Triangle Club Show Called Best in Years.

One of the highlights of each Christmas season is the Princeton Triangle club show, and tonight the Audubon children will be at Fenbrook on Christmas day. Besides Miss Harriet there will be Mrs. Emily Fentress Stocking, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Fentress Jr. (the former Sarah Wood), Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Fentress (the former Celeste Pope), and Paul Fentress.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

EVERY day pedestrians at Lawndale and Wilson avenues observe bits of bread heaped about the bases of the trees, and birds flocking down to Crum— from the snow piled trees to Seasonal. feast. Yesterday one man saw a colored man, a porter at the nearby synagogue, clearing away newly fallen snow from the ground about the trees and scattering bread under each one. The observer inquired of Miss Wineberg, secretary at the synagogue, and learned that the porter, whose name is Dan Black, who has been employed there for seven years, puts bread under the trees for the birds every single day during bad weather. . . . Thought if we printed this some of the rest of you might take thought for the little feathered creatures shivering on the snowy branches of the trees.

If you find a lost or homeless dog won't you take him out to the Northside Animal shelter at 5448 North Damen avenue? Perhaps you've adopted one of the little fellows from the shelter to share Christmas in your own home. You had to make a small donation to the shelter if you did, as well as promise to treat him kindly—in fact sign a paper to that effect. That money did not buy the dog. It merely helped assure his happiness as well as helped to feed the other orphans in the shelter. It was learned, early in the days of running the shelter, that there were many people who did not value a pet they got for nothing. If they grew tired of him, or could no longer keep him, he was turned out on the street. But if they had $3 invested in that dog he was valuable property. Also, will parents not allow small children to maltreat the Christmas puppy, whether from a shelter or a shop for pedigreed pets—a puppy probably already confused by his trip and his new surroundings? . . . And please, O please, do not feel that thought should not be taken for animals when there are human beings in need of aid. It is not human beings OR animals. It is human beings AND animals.

SEASONAL phenomena. The increasing number of envelopes in the mail. . . . Egg nog recipes torn out of the magazines at the hairdressers'. . . . Holly sprigs on mink coats. . . . Children behaving with extraordinary righteousness. . . . Empty lots transformed into Christmas tree groves. . . . Poinsettia plants in the florists' windows. . . . Holly wreaths in the grocer's window. . . . New Year's eve and New Year's day at home cards in the mail. . . . Christmas carols broadcast. . . . Christmas trees in hotel lobbies and public squares. . . . Stores packed with shoppers. . . . Crowds gathered about the department store toy windows. . . . Pedestrians loaded with bundles. . . . Odor of plum pudding and Christmas cookies from the kitchen. Search for the leftover Christmas paper and seals from last year. . . . Perplexed brows and gay hearts.

Expert Offers Aid to Ruffled Hunter of Gifts

Various Suggestions for Last Minute Buys.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The last Saturday roundup of Christmas reminders!

If you are giving twin sweater sets, you'll have to hurry, they're going fast, but you can still assemble the twins to suit your fancy. Skirt suits for the younger set positively blaze their way around. Some scarlet affairs to satisfy the Indian streak in a youngster, some more restrained numbers that go into color in the top only, but these, soul satisfying because of three separate colors, such as navy, gray, and red, green, orange, and flame, and still others that are hectic get together of plaid or checks.

Hat and scarf sets matched to gloves in silks, fuzzy wools, smooth, English tweeds and velvet. . . . new outsize chiffon handkerchiefs for evening, edged with lace or ostrich feathers, with the white and pale flesh pink numbers the most popular.

Other gift suggestions are the white costume girdles, the vanities, the lipsticks, the combs in cases, the cigarette cases, and smart travel clocks all made of swanky white enamel, and the gold and white combines that are also as feminine and as irresistible as the all white. Big chunks of (stimulated) jade decorate lovely new white cigarette boxes and matching trays, a most luxurious gift, and the numerous white waste baskets, white desk accessories and white desk lamps make superlative gifts for the gal who has everything.

There is some typically Christmas costume jewelry in green and red that you can find in multistrand bracelets, clips and earrings. They are exceptionally lovely and effective with ice white satin dinner and dance dresses. Zircon jewelry in flashing blue, a shade that is almost peacock blue, comes set in dusky gold—stunning looking stuff

Good morning!

This is a kaleidoscopic "musical" staged in Hungary.

The time is that when grapes are harvested [do you HARVEST grapes?] and made into wine, and gay gypsies weave in and out among the workers, singing. Gypsies are, it seems, considered necessary at this time of year, and the "caravan" referred to in the title is supposed to make the Countess Wilma's fine festival very lucky indeed.

On such occasions, you gather, the proper thing is for the gypsy chief to compose a brand new song for gypsies and toilers to sing, dance and make love to. This Latali, dark, handsome and musically gifted, attends to in great shape. An so we have the "Wine Song"—long familiar over the radio.

Love interest centers about Latali, the young lady of the house who is supposed to wed another, but in a fit of pique, takes the rover for husband, and Lient, von Tokay, the chap who gets her finally.

After an interlude filled with earfuls of music, amfuls of gorgeous, changing spectacles, and a scenario full of this, that and the other contingency, Latali goes on his way with the jealous and adoring Tinka, whom, for so brief a time, he had deserted, and— but why should I tell you everything?

The story is highly improbable, as it customary in an extravaganza of this sort, but it is engagingly acted. Charles Boyer should please every body by his interpretation of Latali. Loretta Young is effective as Countess Wilma, and Jean Parker is a vivid young whirlwind as Tinka. Other roles are well cared for.

Though "Caravan" is too long, it has been directed with swing and skill by Erik Charell—who, you may remember, was the power behind the megaphone in "Congress Dances."

See you tomorrow.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Christian Foster Jenkins of Honolulu announces the engagement of their daughter, Isabelle, to Lient, Lauris Norstad, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Martin Norstad of 5228 North Malvina avenue. THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

(Tribune Studio Photo.)

A last minute gift selection might well be a bottle of fine perfume in water lily scent. The fragrance will be beloved by women of all tastes.

For your last shopping gases:

1. A bottle—black and gold and ultra chic—of a heavenly water lily perfume that you can find practically all over town. Somehow this scent seems to suit all types from ingenuite to sophisticated, which makes it one of the safest of gift perfume choices. It's sweetish but not borosomely so. It lasts well—and isn't expensive.

2. Any one under ten on your list and still not shopped for? Those Dione quintuplets have popped up again, this time in soap and once again they're winning hearts like nobody's business. All five of the quintuplets side by side in a capacious quintubling of pink or blue flannel bound in satin ribbon.

The celebrated sculptor in soap who thought up the grand idea has given each one of them identical big blue eyes, rosy cheeks, and rosy mouths. And each wears a little lace cap. Children adore them. They're most inexpensive.

Other soap charmers for children, executed by the same artist, are the animals in the ark we told you about a while back, a soapy circus, the famous three little pigs and soap ducks so realistic they all but quack.

3. A compact and lipstick set—also reasonably priced. They're rather formal looking—the compacts flat squares of ivory enamel with restrained trimming of a silver crest in the center. They're for loose powder, each with a satin backed puff. The double ones have an upper compartment for rouge.

The lipstick sheath is also ivory enamel—and the lipstick is a superior one in a choice of good shades and with a fine reputation for indelibility. The sets, in a pretty box, are available in two shops.

4. For ladies of all ages there are sachets of all types, from the superlatively fancy ones in satin cases—flat bags, sausage rolls, or long ones for hangers—to the tiny bags that can be tossed into dresser drawers, carried in the pocketbook or even worn beneath one's dresses. Dainty women have a passion for them usually.

ELEANOR NANGLE.

Morgan Will Open Home for Dance for Granddaughter

New York, Dec. 21.—The season's most prominent deb, Louise Morgan, is to have the year's most notable party. Louise's granddad, J. P. Morgan, is giving a party in her honor next Friday night.

For the first time in more than a decade the Morgan mansion at 231 Madison avenue will be the scene of a magnificent private ball. Five hundred invitations have been issued by Mr. Morgan.

The social and financial "who's who" of the east will gather in the old-fashioned red brick house next Friday night. You can bet your bottom dollar that any one who has been invited is planning on coming.

Louise is J. P.'s eldest grandchild (he has sixteen) and occupies a special little niche in his heart. Her dad is J. P.'s eldest son, Junius Spencer Morgan, who's just been elected president of the New York Yacht club for the third time. Louise's mother is the former Louise Converse of Boston.

RED STEFAN

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Stefan, an Englishman, is escaping from his pursuers out of Russia, where he is known as Stefan Ivanovich. He rescues homeless Elizabeth Radin from freezing to death and takes her with him. She is the widow of an executed engineer. Through English her husband was half Russian. She ran off to escape the advances of Communist Petroff. Stephen tells her his history while they are traveling in a car driven by an old man named Yuri. As a boy Stephen lived on the large Russian estate of his stepfather and grew up with the Darnskys, a large peasant family, until his mother got him an English tutor. When his mother died he went to live with his guardian, Robert Carey, in England. After the revolution in Russia he became a "secret observer" for England, working as a Russian peasant.

INSTALLMENT VI.

A WOLF'S CRY.

Stephen plunged back into his story.

"Well, after that they sent me to Russia. I was to be one of Katinka's twenty odd children, and I was to go to her father, old Yuri, who's driving us now. It was my own idea. Katinka used to talk about her father, but she hadn't seen him since she married, and I knew he wouldn't have the slightest idea how many children she had. I don't think she knew herself—she just went on having them. So when I turned up in Yuri's village and said I was his grandson Stefan, neither he nor any one else had the least doubt about me. I wasn't eighteen, and I looked younger though I was so big, because my skin was very fair in those days. I used to have to keep it well smudged with dirt till it darkened a bit."

"What did you do?" asked Elizabeth.

"Not very much at first. I had to come and go, and get to know the ropes. Then they wanted to know about the tsar and his family. You know all the rumors there were. Well, they wanted some one to go to the palace and find out what had happened—whether they were really dead or not. And after that there were other things—getting people across the frontier, and, of course, making regular reports as to what was going on. I had to serve my two years in the Red army and I was over here for four years straight on end, and then I was back in England for a bit. I've been backward and forwards ever since. My racket job was working in a poison gas factory at Tomak. I laughed. "I was glad to get out of that with a whole skin. I can tell you!" After a pause he said, "I expect this will be my last job."

Elizabeth felt a thrill of superstitions fear. She said "Why?" a little breathlessly.

"Why?" said Stephen. "O, just because. . . I don't want to go on being a Russian peasant for the rest of my life. I've saved a bit, and when old Carey died a year or two ago he left me a couple of thousand pounds and one of his farms. It was very decent of him, and I hope I haven't said anything about him that I oughtn't to. We just didn't talk the same language—that's all. I went into partnership with a cousin, Tom Carey, an awfully good fellow, and we've started breeding horses. Did I tell you I was pretty good with horses?"

"He skimmed up a tree just in time."

"No, you didn't," said Elizabeth.

"Well, I am. It's part of my job, really. You see, I could go all up and down the country as a horse doctor. I'd got to be something that would account for my being away a good bit. I took on cows and pigs as a side line, and it was all very useful. I got quite well known. I might have been taken on as a groom if I'd wanted a job—they go round lecturing to the peasants, you know. But that wouldn't have suited me. You can't just disappear if you're in a government job—and sometimes it suits me to disappear."

"I shouldn't have thought you'd want to be too well known."

He laughed, leaned close to her, and said in a loud stage whisper:

"Shh! Not a word! I'm not always Red Stefan." Then, drawing back again, in a different voice, "Now it's your turn."

He was at once aware of a withdrawal. The silence between them seemed rigid for a moment. Then she said:

"I told you. There's nothing more."

Stephen's thoughts plunged and reared at that. Nothing more—when he wanted to know every single thing that she had ever thought or done. Well, even day she would tell him. He reined in those racing thoughts and became aware that she was asking him a question.

"Where are we going?"

"To Yuri's village—for the moment. Afterwards—I don't know—it depends. I'm not quite sure how things are there just now. You see—he leaned confidentially now. "I've been away all summer. I only got back a week ago, and then I had to dig Yuri out and get him to come up to the town. He didn't want to a bit—he was afraid of a heavy fall of snow. But I had to have a good excuse to be there. So I got him to put a card of market stuff together and chance it. Of course, he sold it pretty well. They tried to stop the peasants selling their own stuff, you know, but they had to let them do it in the end. There are too many of them. They can't shoot 'em all, and if they did the rest of Russia would starve. So Yuri gets his price for butter and vegetables and eggs. As a matter of fact, I had to be in Tomsk to meet the man who is going to take over my job. He didn't come, so they'll probably have to find some one else."

"You mean . . ."

"I expect they got him. I was pretty sure of that by the second day, but I just felt I'd got to hang on. When I saw you on the bridge, of course, I knew why. It was lucky you weren't a day later, because Yuri wouldn't have waited another twenty-four hours for any one on earth. I expect he's right about the snow, but we shall get in before it comes."

She could see him quite plainly now. The road ran south and a little west, and the sullen dawn came up behind them, painting the sky just above the horizon with livid streaks. Everywhere else the clouds were of an even, impenetrable grayness. As they looked back along the way by which they had come there was nothing to be seen but a vast plain hilly velvet in snow. When Elizabeth leaned sideways to get in the car, and looked past old Yuri's humped shoulders there were, however, signs of broken ground and a sprinkling of trees with their branches stark against the snow. As they came up with the first of the trees she heard a loud cawing sound and looked about her for a sign of crow or raven. The sound came again, much farther off. And then, to her extreme surprise, a cuckoo called from a thicket on their right. She turned to Stephen and found him regarding her gravely.

"Did you know there were cuckoos in Russia?" he asked, and before she could answer the call came again, behind them. It hung on the frosty air, came more faintly, and died away.

"Yuri looked over his shoulder, said something in a rapid mutter, and, turning back, jerked at the reins."

"What did he say?" said Elizabeth. "Was it about the cuckoo? Did he hear it? I thought you said he couldn't hear anything."

Stephen nodded.

"He can hear one thing, but it's not the cuckoo. He was only saying something about the snow. He says he smells wind, and perhaps that'll carry it away. Do you know what the one thing is that he can hear?"

He lived up farther north when he was a boy, and he was chased by wolves. He was in a two horse sleigh with two men, and when the wolves were gaining on them they chucked Yuri out. He was only a peasant child, you see. I tell you some of those Russian nobles fairly asked for the revolution. Yuri's father was a serf. They treated 'em like dogs, and after they were emancipated they cheated 'em right and left. It's only about twenty-five years since a peasant could be flogged by his master. If he died of the flogging no one worried—there were lots of peasants."

"What happened to Yuri? How did he escape?"

"He climbed up a tree just in time, and the wolves followed the sleigh. He nearly died of the cold and the fright, and to this day he can hear a wolf's cry, when he can't hear anything else. Look—you watch him!"

She looked round at Yuri's back. He drove in a hunched attitude and might almost have been asleep. As she looked at him there came, as it seemed from a long way off, a faint sound. Elizabeth found herself listening for it to come again, and when it came, a little louder, she felt as if a drop of ice cold water had trickled down her spine.

Society Faces 2 Days Filled with Events

Harriet Fentress Engaged to Bruce Benson.

las Sturges and the T. Albert Potters will give for Miss Macdonald and Miss Fanny McPherson.

After the snow every one will rush through the snow to the Blackstone hotel where the John Leo Fortunes, the Henry B. Babsons, and the George Bates Harringtons are giving a ball for their debutante daughters, Miss Barbara Fortune, Miss Betty Babson, and Miss Mary Harrington. Miss Babson was presented at a tea earlier this fall, but the dance will be the formal introduction for Miss Fortune and Miss Harrington. Miss Fortune attended the Girls' Latin school and went to Vassar last year. Miss Harrington also attended the Latin school and then finished at Miss Shipley's at Bryn Mawr.

Ball Is Given for Two Debutantes.

It was early this morning that the orchestra played "Home, Sweet Home" at the Casino and the debutantes and their beaux went home. The party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland and Mr. and Mrs. Howell B. Erlinger Jr. gave last night for their debutante daughters, Miss Martha Borland and Miss Bertha Erlinger.

Miss Borland was introduced for society at a tea earlier in the season, but the dinner dance last night was Miss Erlinger's debut.

The buds and their mothers made a stunning picture as they received their guests at the entrance to the ballroom, for the girls were gowned in heavy parchment satin and their mothers in gold satin. The debutante Miss Borland's gown was finished in a bow, while Miss Erlinger's low backed gown had loops over the shoulders. The gowns were form-fitting with flared skirts, and each had a white orchid with deep purple centers, while their mothers wore deep purple orchids with flame centers.

Miss Adele Hulbert Will Bow Today.

Miss Adele Hulbert will make her bow to society this afternoon at a reception to be given by her mother, Mrs. Milton Hulbert, between 4 and 7 o'clock at the Hulbert residence, 3150 Sheridan road. The party will be something of a Chicago debut for the Hulbert family for they have been away from the city the last several years, circling the globe twice and living in the east.

Almost as soon as Miss Marianne Dunn and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, arrive from Washington, D. C., tomorrow to visit Mr. and Mrs. Laurence H. Armour in Lake Forest, they will be whisked over to the O'Connells for the large luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Armour are giving for their debutante niece and for Miss Caryl Ely and Miss Betty Brooks, both Chicago buds.

Although most of the young guests will be young people, there will be a few grownups who will be very much interested in seeing Mr. and Mrs. Dunn. Before her marriage to Mr. Dunn who now holds the post of assistant secretary of state, Mrs. Dunn was Mary Armour, sister of Laurence and Watson Armour.

Tomorrow evening there are at least three parties for the debutantes and their beaux. Miss Alice Bradley, the bud in the Herbert E. Bradley family, is to be the special guest at a dinner to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker at their apartment at 1100 Lake Shore drive.

McLaughlins Will Entertain at Supper.

At the same hour over at the Casino Maj. and Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin will be entertaining 40 young guests at supper for their two attractive nieces, Jane and Elroy Bradford. The supper is to be at 6:15 "sharp" so that there will be time to get out to the Chicago Stadium where the Black Hawks will play the Canadiens.

This is the first large party that Jane and her sister have attended since they are in mourning for their mother who passed away last summer in the east.

There's another hockey party tomorrow night for Miss Jane Frost and her sister Mary. The junior Edward L. Ryersons are giving the hockey party, preceded by supper at their residence.

Owing to the illness of their daughter Marjorie M. and Mrs. Carl W. Kelly of Winnetka have recalled the invitations to her debut tea on Christmas day. Because Miss Kelly has been at Sarah Lawrence college since early fall and now because of illness cannot enjoy any of the debutante gaiety of this season Mr. and Mrs. Kelly have decided to postpone her debut until next year. They will send her and their second daughter, Patricia, together at a tea at their home in the early fall.

The tea that the Frederic A. de Peysters will give to introduce their daughter Jane to society will take place next Saturday at the De Peyster home in Winnetka and not this afternoon as has been stated several times. Miss de Peyster is a student at Smith. Taking advantage of all of the December snow Mrs. George B. Massey is giving a luncheon and winter sports party this noon for her daughter, Miss Phoebe Massey. Miss Massey is at home from the east for the holidays.

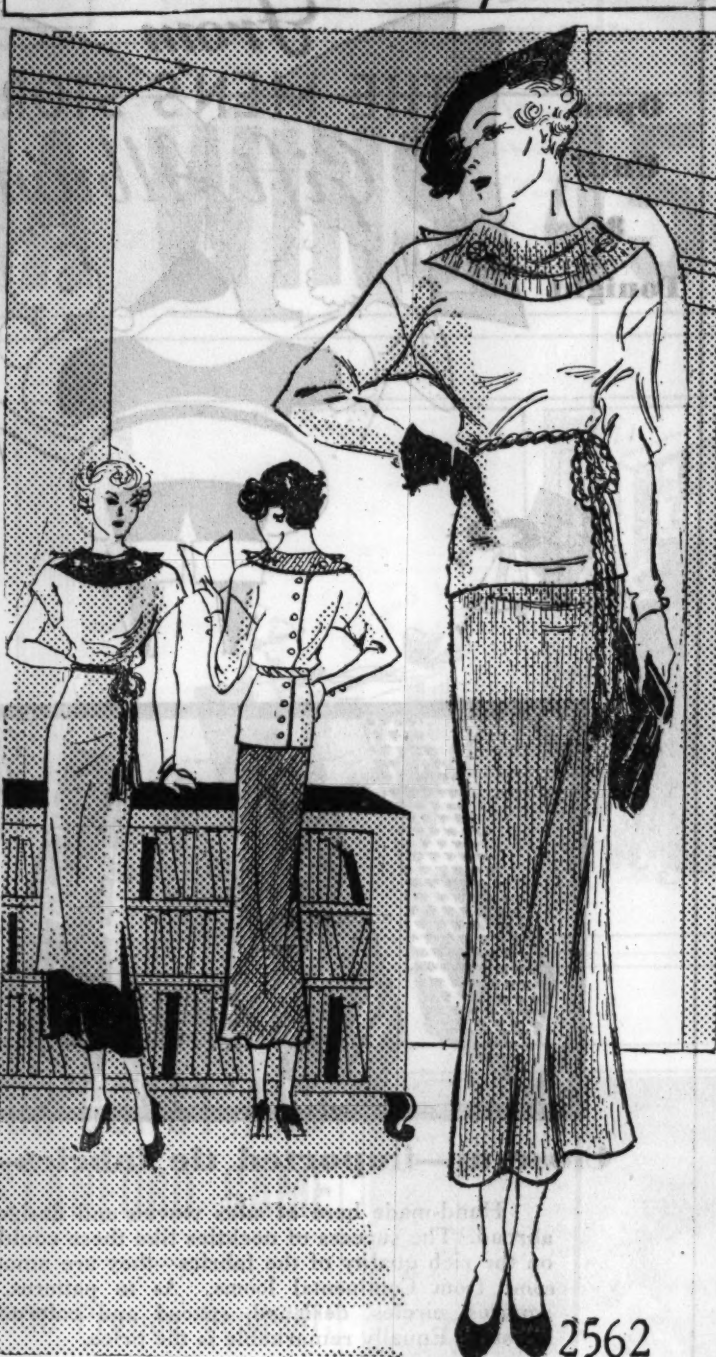

Gala Performance Closes Opera Tonight.

While the younger members of society are enjoying themselves at the Auditorium the older ones will be having an entertaining evening at the Civic Opera house, where the Chicago Grand Opera company is giving its final performance of the season tonight. It is to be a gala one, with the first half of the program in a serious vein and the second half in a decidedly lighter mood, for it is to be a burlesque on several bits of well known operas that are in themselves farcical.

Every box will be occupied and the great theater probably will present as brilliant a scene as it did at the premiere six weeks ago tonight. After the performance many of the audience will go to the College Inn in the Hotel Sherman, where a cabaret opera party has been arranged by Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick.

Two Tunics Are Easy to Make

WOMAN'S AND MISS' TUNIC DRESS.

These two lovely tunic models, inexpensive to make as well as charming, are included in today's pattern. The high length tunic is smart for casual daytime occasions when carried out in a pebbly silk crepe or one of the sheer woolsens. The sleeveless tunic in the small sketch is just the thing for after-noon parties, and for dinner and theater going. It will be stunning in a dark pebbly crepe topped by a bright colored plain or metal crepe.

The pattern, No. 2562, comes in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure.

Arrived at home yesterday from New York, where they were married on Dec. 12. They are staying in the former Mrs. Francis Johnson's apartment at 1430 Lake Shore drive and will spend Christmas there.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Simms and the former Ruth Hanna McCormick's younger children, Medill and Ruth, who have been at the Drake hotel for a day or two, are leaving today for Cleveland to spend Christmas with some of Mrs. Simms' relatives.

From the east comes news of the birth of a daughter on Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham of Bedford Hills, New York. Mrs. Frothingham is the former Mary Wegg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Wegg.

Hubbard Phelps

Hubbard Phelps arrived in Chicago yesterday from Phoenix to spend a fortnight with his mother, Mrs. Louise deKoven Phelps. Mrs. Phelps and her mother, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, are planning to go to Phoenix for the rest of the winter about Jan. 15.

Young Mr. Phelps is attending business school there this year.

His cousin, William McCormick Blair Jr., who also is spending the rest of the winter in In Del Monte, Cal., for Christmas as the guest of Samuel F. B. Morse.

The eldest son of the Blairs, Edward, who is at Yale, and the youngest, Bowen, who is at Groton, will immediately after the ceremony for their parents in Lake Forest.

Oren E. Taft, who spends every winter in Phoenix, already has gone there and Mrs. Taft will join him next week.

Miss Elizabeth Eckhart, the Percy B. Eckhart's pretty daughter, will arrive at home today to spend the Christmas holidays with her parents.

Perhaps her fiancé, Darwin P. Kingsley Jr., will come out from New York for part of the holidays. Miss Eckhart will not be married until after her graduation from Vassar this June, according to present plans.

Recent Brides

Among the recent brides and bridegrooms who will be in Chicago for the holidays are the Alfred Uhlens, who will be with the former Paula Uhlens' father, Edward J. Uhlens, the Sargent Collings (Eleanor McCormick) and the junior H. Warren Bucklers (Patty McCormick), who will be with Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick; the Otto Teegens, who will stay with the former Dorothy Schmidt's mother, Mrs. Fredrick M. Schmidt; and their children, who are now to stay until a week from Saturday, and Mr. Teegen will join here today to stay until Wednesday, and Mr. Teegen will join here today to stay until Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burns (Sara Orla) and their children, who arrived Wednesday from California, to be with the Ralph C. Otises, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Fetter (Florence Otis) are giving a cocktail party for them this afternoon. Mrs. Burns and the children will remain in Chicago until the end of January.

Philip Manker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest W. Manker, arrived at home yesterday to spend his holiday from Princeton, where he is a sophomore. Mr. and Mrs. Manker, whose home is in Detroit, are just settled in an apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive.

Art Institute Acquires Seven New Paintings

Galleries Rehung to Place Them in Order.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Keeping in step with the Christmas spirit, the Art Institute has withheld until now its announcement of the recent acquisition of seven important paintings for the permanent collection. The second floor galleries have been rehanged and arranged in chronological order and the new pictures are in their date and national groups.

First among them is the piquant and delightful "Portrait of a Young Woman," by Pieter Dordrecht, the Dutch painter, executed about 1650. The portrait was formerly in the Stephen von Aulpsitz collection in Vienna. It was purchased through the Wilson L. Mead fund.

"The Francis the First and a Favorite," by Richard Parke Bonington, whose charming little landscapes have endeared him to a wide audience outside of his native England, is painted somewhat in the Rubens manner, lavishly and vigorously. The picture was acquired through the Simeon B. Williams fund.

"Eugene de la Roche," by Gauguin, brings thoughts of Van Gogh to mind. It was painted in 1888 when the two artists shared the same house at Arles for a period. Van Gogh thought he was doing Gauguin a favor; Gauguin thought he was the one who was giving. Between them the weeks of the visit were a lamentable failure and Van Gogh was irritated to the point of madness by the manner and cruel speech of his friend. The picture is installed in the gallery devoted to the French moderns. It was bought through the Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Coburn Memorial fund.

The Friends of American Art purchased for the Art Institute the next of the new paintings, "View on the Schuylkill," by John Neagle. The landscape was painted in 1827; it is an interesting early American scene. The Rembrandt, "Christ Washing the Disciples' Feet," is a most distinguished canvas. It was bought through the Robert Alexander Waller Memorial fund. It came from a famous Hungarian collection. The "Resurrection," an Italian painting of about 1600, provided a sensation at the opening of the institute's winter shows some ten days ago. It is an unusual and rich composition and was bought from the A. A. McKay fund for the Munger collection.

One still life has been added. It is the "Cheese and Bread," school of Zurbarán. The museum lacked till now a typical Spanish still life and was delighted to find as stunning an example as this. It fills a distinct need. It, too, was acquired for the Munger collection from the A. A. McKay fund.

Cardinal and ruby nail polishes, I am told, still are best sellers in spite of rumors that finger tips were being torn down considerably in spite of male protests that never die in this connection. I'll say that one good thing has come out of all this nail polish business. I get the reaction in mail. I see it in beauty parlors and I hear women commenting on the topic themselves. The hand skin is being looked after better since hands are more on exhibition with the flaming decorations.

In a small out of the way beauty parlor where one gets three things done at an incredibly low price I overheard a manicurist scolding a client for not using some lotion on her hands. Meanwhile she was using some oil preparation on the patron's hands before she put the bright nail polish on.

I hear, too, that they're selling more of the overnight gloves for hand beauty than formerly. Incidentally, I'd advise women who have roughened red hands, or hands that are beginning to show age signs, to try gloves and a good hand cream to wear overnight. The effect is quite stimulating after a few wearings. Besides, this sort of hand care makes one take more pride in nails. The thing works both ways.

So keen is hand interest, in fact, that now one can buy gloves for street wear that promise hand preservation and added beauty. The leather is treated with hand lotion ingredients before being made up into gloves, and they're pleasing to wear. They're soft and pliable and wash easily, and though they come in the dark colors, too.

Certain women find that in the cold weather their nails not only break easily but they're subject to a grimmer underlaid color than at other times of year. This grime has nothing to do with cleanliness. It's just a grayish shade under the nail tip. The soaking of the fingertips in warm oil is about the best thing I know for the trouble, and revivifies the white tip with frequent application of the pencil whitener. Convenient little gadgets these nail pencils, which you can tote around early in your pocketbook and which whiten as if you run water over the nail tips before applying.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

FOUR-CARD SUITS AND TWO-BIDS.

Yesterday I explained why the bidding of a four card suit in response to a two bid is taboo under my system. Now let us consider why the opening bidder should never make a two bid on a four card suit. You hold

Sp-A K Q J Di-A K K x H-A K Q J Cl-x

What should you do? Admittedly there are only three losers in the hand, and it is clear that you have a game in whichever major suit your partner can support with four small ones. It is, however, also true, is it not, that three trumps is cold unless they can run five clubs off immediately against you. To my mind, this hand is, before you hear otherwise from your partner, far more promising in no trumps than in a suit. If your partner does not have four cards in any suit but clubs, and no high clubs, this hand may well be utterly wrecked in a suit. If you were to make a two bid, you would have bid all the suits before you stopped bidding. The opponents will be told to lead a club even if that is not their natural lead—and, unless you want to throw away aces and kings, you will HAVE TO TRUMP A CLUB LEAD AND REDUCE YOUR HAND TO THREE TRUMPS while the opponents still have six trumps against you. As you have a singleton yourself, it is quite likely that one of them has a singleton trump, leaving the other opponent with two more trumps than you. When you lose control of the trump situation, all the high cards in the deck will not save you. I would rather miss a game here and there than expose myself to the risk of being massacred as the result of a two bid in which I lost control of trumps though the hand was not a freak of the ghoulish species. With a hand of this type you have game in no trumps, provided only that they do not open clubs or cannot run five clubs right off the bat.

Big Two No Trumps.

Yes, I know you have a singleton; but you also have a singular hand. If your partner can make any suit response, it can presumably only be a two bid in which he has three no trumps is a perfectly safe contract.

The Suit Declaration Can Still Be Attempted.

Feeling that four no trumps would be a pretty safe contract if partner's response to two no trumps were three clubs, I would bid three spades; if he bid three no trumps, four hearts. I have now given him at least a choice between the majors, and he could read me for a very unusual kind of two no trump opening bid. If he could still do no more than bid four no trumps in denial of the majors, I would pass; but if he had, say, Q 10 9 in diamonds and K Q x x x, he would indeed be lacking in imagination and courage if he failed to bid six no trumps for me.

Modern Girls Give Hands Big Share of Care

BY MARY MEADE.

Many folk tales have come down to us concerning the origin of the Christmas tree—stories of its worship in the ancient Druid religion and of strange rites held beneath its branches centuries before the Christian era. But none of all like the one which credits Martin Luther with the honor of first bringing home a Christmas tree—though that was perhaps not what he called it.

The story suggests that Martin Luther one night attempted to describe to his wife and children the beauty of the snow covered trees under the starry sky. Suddenly he went into the garden, cut off a little fir tree, and dragged it into the nursery. He put some candles on the branches and lighted them. From this little act—the story goes—we have gained what we think of today as a Christmas tree.

But whether we believe this or another of the graceful legends, we do at least know that for hundreds of years Germany has used the tree as a symbol for winter rejoicing and gaiety. And since so many of our good times have already been borrowed from the Teutonic races we might well go steps further and let them help us with something to eat.

Little cakes, spiced and frosted and shaped like stars and animals, have spoiled Christmas eve for German children for generations. Roast geese with rice for stuffing is the best of all Yuletide offerings. A typical German Christmas family dinner would read something like this:

GERMAN CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Clear Bouillabaisse with Rolls
Fish Course
White Wine
Roast Goose with Rice Stuffing
Mashed Potatoes
Red Cabbage
Apple Sauce
Pickled Pumpkin
Red Wine
Almond Torte with Whipped Cream

RISE STUFFING.

The stuffing for the roast goose is simple—but deliciously satisfying. It is made of equal proportions of cooked rice, chopped uncooked prunes, and seedless raisins. Cut the quantity by the size of your goose.

RED CABBAGE.

There's a little extra trick to this German red cabbage which lends a surprise element to any meal. Cut up and cook a red cabbage with 1 tablespoon of fat and a little water. In the meantime combine 1/4 cup of vinegar, 2 tablespoons of sugar, 2 sour apples, cut fine, and salt and cloves to season. Heat these together, then add the combination to the cabbage. Stew gently until the cabbage and apples are just tender, adding more water as it is needed. Serve hot.

PICKLED PUMPKIN.

1 lemon
7 cups cider vinegar
6 cups sugar
3 tablespoons chopped ginger root
1 teaspoon clover
1 tablespoon broken cinnamon bark
1 tablespoon whole cloves

Slice the lemon thin and put it into a preserving kettle with 1/4 cup of water. Bring to a brisk boil, then add the pumpkin which has been cleaned and cut into 2-inch squares. Add the sugar, vinegar, and spices. Boil gently for 1 1/2 hours or until the pumpkin is tender. Pour into sterile jars and seal. Serve with meat or fowl.

Blue Devils.

The Blue Devils, a French organization, who have a Christmas party for 100 needy children at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Hotel La Salle. Special guests will be the French Consul General Rene Weiller and Mme. Weiller, and the English Consul General Lewis Bernays and Mrs. Bernays.

Parents Should Not Open Their Children's Mail

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON EVANS

"Robert, what are you doing? Don't open that letter—it's mine!" called out Robert's mother as she saw him pick up the paper knife and start to open the mail on her desk.

"But, mother, you open my letters—and, anyhow, this has that funny kind of writing, and I know it's from Aunt Elizabeth," answered small Robert.

"Well, no matter—that's different—I'm your mother and you're only a little boy," was the mother's answer. And for her the matter stopped there.

To an almost absolute degree we get back from children what we give them. If we're courteous to them they'll be courteous to us—in spirit, if not in actual words. If we respect them as people they'll respect us. If we have a nice regard for their possessions they will so regard ours. If we respect their reticences they will respect ours or render us a silent appreciation of our delicacy. If we take the same attitude toward their mail that we would assume toward that of another adult they will not even think of opening a letter of ours without permission. If we want good things back from the children we can't begin too early to give them.

Take the matter of mail. A letter all stamped and addressed to him, and delivered by the postman, is a great event to a small child. The wise mother lets him have it and look it over, then open it himself and take out its contents, even though he cannot read it himself. The same with any package that comes for him.

When he is older and can read his own letters it is for him to be the one to read them aloud or pass them over with a "Want to see Jim's letter?" "Doesn't do this and you can see that he doesn't want to, then that's that—at least for the time being. Sometimes, though, you can tell by the way he leaves the letter lying around that he has no reserve about it—in which case, if you're interested enough, you can quite companionably say, "Mind if I read Jim's letter?"

INDIANA WINS, 45-41; ILLINI BEAT WASHINGTON

HUEY DECIDES HE'LL CONTROL L. S. U. ELEVEN

Expects to Name New Coach by Jan. 1.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Senator Huey P. Long announced today that for the time being he is the coach of Louisiana State university and that he had moved the management of the team from Third street, Baton Rouge, to the state capital. Third street is the principal street in Baton Rouge.

"I don't care what the alumni and those Third street coaches have to say about Capt. Biff Jones getting out as coach," said Long. "I want it understood I am going to have the say so about Louisiana State university football and I'm not going to listen to any of those volunteer wisemen. I don't know when we'll name a real working coach, but it will be around Jan. 1."

Huey Is Getting Mad.
"If Capt. Biff keeps on talking we may announce his successor before that time. The announcement of who will take over Mr. Jones' job has been withheld out of deference to him. All this talk about Mr. Jones' quitting L. S. U. might lead the public to think that he had been running our great university. No such thing has happened. The faculty, the president, the governor, and me have been running that university for the people of Louisiana. Football coaches have been just part of our machine."

The Louisiana State university football squad, the athletic council, and the alumni and the student body are said to resent Long's assumption of all authority. A campus demonstration was averted only by Capt. Jones' refusal to make any statement on the break with Long or to discuss the situation.

Players Back Jones.
The players went on their holiday vacation greatly upset by the situation and several were outspoken in their views on Long's interference. The players know the inside of the fight between Jones and Long, admire the captain and are with him 100 per cent.

Efforts have been made by faculty and athletic leaders to win the players over to the view that the university's interests should come first.

"Forget Long and Jones and their quarrel and think of the university. The senator and captain will be gone and forgotten eventually, but the university is here to stay."

Resentment is not confined to the players, it is indicated. Some members of the athletic council which were not consulted by Jones in considering and accepting Jones' resignation. These council members think they should have been acquainted with the situation, the first news of which they obtained through newspapers.

PLAYERS LIKE COACH
Norman, Okla., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Football players, usually shunted into the background when the question of hiring new coaches is raised, today scored a definite victory at the University of Oklahoma in the case of Lewie W. Hardage and Bo Bowland, the Sooners' coaches.

Both Hardage and Bowland, it was generally understood, had incurred the disfavor of the athletic council to a point where it was known that their contracts would not be renewed. Today, the team held a meeting and a large majority voted in favor of retaining Hardage and Bowland. Dr. G. V. Williams, head of the athletic council, indicated the two would be held over, because of the players' holding.

It was reported that 40 members of the squad had voted to keep the coaches and 2 against.

The plan to remove the two coaches had progressed to the stage where overtures had been made to Capt. Biff Jones, who recently resigned at Louisiana State university, after a row with Senator Huey Long. Lynn Waldorf, coach at Kansas State, also had been approached.

Dr. Williams said Maj. Pat Maloney, commander of the university R. O. T. C. unit, had telephoned Capt. Jones last night, suggesting that he come to Norman. Jones, however, said he wished to retire as a coach and hoped to be transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kas.

THE GUMPS—HIDE AND SEEK

STRONG HOOSIER FINISH DEFEATS CAPITAL TEAM

George Washington Leads at Half.

Games Tonight

Michigan State at Northwestern.
Illinois at St. Louis U.
Purdue at Butler.
Indiana at Temple.
Wisconsin at Marquette.
St. Ambrose at Loyola.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The touring Indiana university basketball team tonight staged a furious rally to defeat George Washington, 45 to 41. The Big Ten quintet's hard earned triumph ended the winning streak of George Washington.

The Hoosiers, after trailing, 29 to 17, at the half, put on the pressure in the second period and Etnire, Fechtman, and Kohrt broke through for enough baskets to turn the tide. Fechtman, the Hoosiers' towering center, made five field goals and added three free throws to pace the Indiana drive. Etnire dropped in four baskets, while Kohrt and Gunnings each scored three times from the field.

George Washington stepped away into an early lead, but could not extend its advantage beyond the half time margin. Howell, flashy forward, punctured the Indiana defense for five baskets. His speed resulted in several fouls being called against the Big Ten defense men, and Howell made good on six free throws. His sixteen points was high for both teams.

Leemans and Schoenfeld, Colonial guards, also were effective from the field, the former making four baskets, the latter five. Lineups:

INDIANA (45): HOWELL (41), Fechtman (6), Etnire (5), Kohrt (3), Gunnings (3), Leemans (2), Schoenfeld (2), Scott (2), Porter (2).
WASHINGTON (41): HOWELL (11), Fechtman (6), Etnire (5), Kohrt (3), Gunnings (3), Leemans (2), Schoenfeld (2), Scott (2), Porter (2).

ILLINOIS WINS, 35-18
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 21.—(P)—With Bob Riegel, 6 foot 4 inch sophomore center, playing a sterling game, the university of Illinois basketball team beat Washington university tonight, 35 to 18. The game was the second of a doubleheader, St. Louis university winning over Missouri, 35 to 18, in the opener.

Riegel scored five field goals, all but one on follow ups of his teammates' long shots. He acted as the pivot for the Illini attack and was a threat that kept the Bears continually on the defense.

Washington, with a team mostly composed of freshmen, who have had only about two weeks' practice, was extremely ragged and offered a poor contrast to the polished team work of the Illini.

Illinois jumped into an immediate lead and, from the start of the game, left little doubt of the final outcome. Washington, however, showed a desperate first half defense and was able to hold Illinois to fifteen points, while scoring eight themselves.

At the start of the second half, the Bears showed to their best advantage, but, after a few minutes of sparkling play, the team dropped and let Illinois amass its decisive total.

PURDUE MEETS SPARTANS
Northwestern's basketball march, which has carried the Wildcats through four consecutive victories, will be challenged at Patten gymnasium tonight by the Michigan State Spartans.

Despite a loss to Michigan, the visitors are expected to give the Wildcats plenty of trouble. In the game with the Wolverines the Spartans were handicapped by the absence of their star center, Arnold Van Fassen, who was out with injuries. He will be in the lineup against the Wildcats tonight. Ted Payeur, assistant Wildcat coach, who attended the Michigan State-Michigan game, said the Spartans are the best ball handling team that he has seen this year.

NORTHWESTERN, MICHIGAN STATE.
Patten, Dec. 21.—(P)—Purdue will attempt to break the jinx of the Butler fieldhouse tomorrow night when the Boilermakers' Big Ten title defenders, undefeated in three games this season, journey to Indianapolis to meet the Butler Bulldogs.

In past meetings between the two Hoosier rivals the Butler fieldhouse always has cast a spell over Purdue's victory hopes, and Coach Lambert has made no secret of the fact that he expects one of the toughest battles of the season.

Lambert intends to start the same combination that defeated Washburn Monday night, with co-capt. Norman Cottom and Bob Kessler at forwards; Jim Seaward, former Indianapolis high school star, at center; Bob White at floor guard, and co-capt. Ed Shaver at back guard.

ALABAMA HEADS FOR COAST AND STANFORD GAME

2,000 Provide Send-off; Coach Is Hopeful.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The University of Alabama football team, preparing for its fourth appearance in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Cal., went through a brief signal drill here this morning and then boarded a train for the coast, where it will meet Stanford, best of the Pacific coast teams, on New Year's day.

Thomas Expects to Win.
A crowd of more than 2,000 fans, headed by Dr. George H. Denny, president of the university, were at the station to see the Crimson Tide off on its long trip to California. It will arrive late Christmas eve, Dr. Denny, who has seen Alabama pile up a perfect record in its other three Rose Bowl games, will not be present to cheer the team on this year because of a special session of the Alabama legislature. However, scores of co-eds and a student orchestra accompanied the team.

Coach Frank Thomas, who has been the boss of the Tide since Wallace Wade left, made only a brief statement as to the outcome of the game, and the rest of the coaching staff remained mum.

"I think the boys will win if they're at their best," Thomas said, "but if they aren't, well—I don't know."

Tide Has Great Record.
In its three previous appearances, Alabama, undefeated in nine games this season, won two games and tied one. In 1925 Johnny Mack Brown and Booley Hubert led the Tide to a 20 to 13 decision over Washington; the following year, it gained a 7 to 7 tie with Stanford, and in 1930, Wallace Wade's last year at Alabama, whipped Washington State, 24 to 0.

Hardened by two weeks of practice since training was resumed, the Alabama squad is in excellent condition with the single exception of Bob Ed Morrow, regular guard, whose nose has been broken in practice last week. He is expected to be ready for Stanford, however.

Millard Howell, ace back, who was bothered by injuries earlier, has been pronounced in the best condition of the year. He has not scrimmaged since September, but has done plenty of running in the big games, and played the entire 60 minutes against Tennessee, the tide's toughest foe in the regular season.

STANFORD LABORS ON.
Stanford University, Cal., Dec. 21.—(P)—Stanford's football men went through two long workouts today, the first since the team's return from its tour of the Pacific coast, after a row with Senator Huey Long. Lynn Waldorf, coach at Kansas State, also had been approached.

Dr. Williams said Maj. Pat Maloney, commander of the university R. O. T. C. unit, had telephoned Capt. Jones last night, suggesting that he come to Norman. Jones, however, said he wished to retire as a coach and hoped to be transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kas.

$200,000 in Race Lottery Tickets Is Confiscated
Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Two hundred thousand dollars worth of tickets for a Santa Anita race lottery were in possession of authorities today as search proceeded for the confidence gang who have sold thousands of $150 and $1 tickets in the illegal and unauthorized enterprise. The tickets were supposed to be for a sweepstakes on the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap.

The breezy Baer, current champion, had a much easier officiating task. He supervised the action while Al McCoy, 172, Boston, belted out a three round knockout over Buck Tracey, 174, in another scheduled 10 rounder.

MEN OF THE HOUR AT LOYOLA

Loyola university, long one of the leading basketball centers in the metropolitan area, expects to prolong its court success through the efforts of these young men. Left to right, they are: Edward Murray, Marvin Cole, William Lang, Ed Calihan, and Joseph Schuessler. They will play St. Ambrose tonight.

Loyola Meets St. Ambrose Five Tonight

The St. Ambrose college basketball team will meet Loyola university at Loyola gymnasium tonight. St. Ambrose was victorious in its second game of the season Thursday night, whipping Dubuque university, its first Iowa conference opponent, 47 to 29, while Loyola was suffering its first defeat of the season at the hands of Duquesne.

Three Are Chicagoans.
Three members of the Davenport school's squad are Chicagoans, Bill Tyrell, former St. Mel's star, regular forward; Bernard Hourihan, substitute guard, also of St. Mel's; and Keller, guard, of St. George High school, Evanston.

Keller probably will start at the only position left open by the graduation of Hod Urie.

The big three of the St. Ambrose attack, Vic Pahl, center; Jim Minnet, forward; and Lou Dvorsky, guard, who turned in twenty-seven points Thursday night, probably will lead the team in scoring.

De Paul Wins 22d Straight Victory, 47-18

De Paul university scored its twenty-second straight basketball victory last night at the De Paul gym brushing aside Missouri State Teachers college of Cape Girardeau, Mo., 47 to 18. It was the Demons' fourth triumph of the season.

Nine of the twelve De Paul men who saw action scored at least one from the field. Ray Adams connected for four field goals to share high scoring honors with Capt. Frank Linskey and Walt Diduch who relieved Nick Yost at the center post in the second half.

The starting five of Adams, Sand, Yost, Linskey and Wendt retired at the start of the second period with the score 24 to 6 in favor of De Paul.

Joe and George McDonald the heralded twins of the Missouri team had difficulty in solving the Demons' defense. Joe scored one basket while George was held scoreless. Lineup:

DE PAUL (47): ADAMS (18), Sand (10), Yost (8), Linskey (7), Wendt (6), Phillips (5), Champion (4), Diduch (3), Boone (2), Krause (2), Riney (2), Tracey (2).
MISSOURI STATE TEACHERS (18): HUBBARD (8), McDowell (5), Dwyer (3), Masteller (2), Jones (2), Klinef (2), Riney (2), McDonald (2).

JOHNSON PICKS INDIANS FIRST, WHITE SOX LAST
Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The Cleveland Indians are as well fixed as any other team to win the 1935 American league championship. Their manager, Walter Johnson, today said the Tribe and the 1933 titleholders, the Detroit Tigers, were the outstanding contenders for next season's pennant.

Johnson's choices for the championship, in order he expects to see them finish, are Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, St. Louis, and Chicago. He pointed out that Detroit deserved to win this year, but were extremely lucky in getting through without casualties. He said Boston, with Joe Cronin as a playing manager, would be considerably improved, but still needed to fill a few gaps. He also indicated that the Yankees might cause trouble.

YALE'S VICTORY OVER PRINCETON YEAR'S BIG UPSET

Experts Place Cards' Rise Second in Ballot.

New York, Dec. 21.—(P)—Looking back over a year filled with startling exploits and stunning surprises in sports competition, newspaper experts today appeared agreed on these four points:

1. They were startled most, for one afternoon's engagement, by Yale's football upset of Princeton's previously unbeaten team, with only eleven men playing the entire game for Yale.

2. For a longer period of action in any single sport, they were most amazed by the last three weeks of the National league pennant race, combining the collapse of the Giants and the victorious drive of the Cardinals.

3. The biggest individual sensation of the year was the manner in which Max Baer toppled Primo Carnera from the heavyweight boxing throne.

4. The brightest flash of individual skill, in any sport, for a single afternoon, was the feat of Carl Hubbell of the Giants in striking out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Fox, Al Simmons, and Joe Cronin in succession during the major league All-Star baseball game.

Yale Wins by One Vote.
These were the most conspicuous eye-catching episodes, based upon opinions expressed in the fourth annual Associated Press poll on the year's major developments. Yale's triumph outpointed the rise of the Cardinals, 128 to 125, in the vote on the biggest upset or surprise of 1934. The other two outstanding football reversals, in the experts' judgment, were the overthrow of the Chicago Bears by the New York Giants for the professional title and Columbia's rose bowl victory over Stanford last New Year's day.

Listed among the most thrilling individual feats of the year were Al Barabas' touchdown run for Columbia in the Rose Bowl game, Slide Cutler's winning field goal for Navy against Army, the Roscoe-to-Kelly pass that enabled Yale to whip Princeton, and Ken Strong's scoring spree for the Giants against the Bears in the pro championship game at the Polo grounds.

Series Leaves Memories.
The world series between the Cardinals and Detroit Tigers left a flock of vivid memories, judging from the reaction of sports editors. They listed the collapse of the Tiger infield in the first game, the beating of Dizzy Dean in the fourth and the seven run rally of the Cardinals in the final contest as outstanding occurrences of the year.

To our followers the most dramatic occurrence of the year was the running of the Metropolitan handicap, during which the five-year old Chase Me, previously unbeaten, broke down and the renowned Equipoise was disqualified for fouling Mr. Khayyam.

Rainbow Polls Vote.
Rainbow's come-back to defend the America's cup against Endeavour naturally topped the list of surprises at sea. The leading individual upset in golf appeared to be the defeat of Francis Ouimet in the first round of the U. S. amateur championship by a new Bobby Jones—Robert Carpenter Jones of Detroit.

Tennis surprises included the American Davis cup team's come-back to beat Australia after losing the first two matches, and Wilmer Allison's advance to the final round of the U. S. singles championship against Fred Perry.

PURDUE FACES BUTLER
Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Purdue will attempt to break the jinx of the Butler fieldhouse tomorrow night when the Boilermakers' Big Ten title defenders, undefeated in three games this season, journey to Indianapolis to meet the Butler Bulldogs.

In past meetings between the two Hoosier rivals the Butler fieldhouse always has cast a spell over Purdue's victory hopes, and Coach Lambert has made no secret of the fact that he expects one of the toughest battles of the season.

Lambert intends to start the same combination that defeated Washburn Monday night, with co-capt. Norman Cottom and Bob Kessler at forwards; Jim Seaward, former Indianapolis high school star, at center; Bob White at floor guard, and co-capt. Ed Shaver at back guard.

St. Patrick, Chicago, 40; St. Mary's, Huntington, Ind., 29.

GAMES TONIGHT.
De Paul vs. St. Mel, 8 p. m.
St. Patrick, Kankakee, vs. St. Patrick, Chicago, 9 p. m.

De Paul academy marched into the semi-final round of the first annual Catholic high school basketball tournament under the auspices of St. George of Evanston by defeating Corpus Christi, Galesburg, 31 to 17, at the St. George gymnasium last night.

De Paul led at the end of the first period, 11 to 1. Corpus Christi scored only five points in the second period, and the Chicago quintet led at half time, 18 to 6. Evans, star center on the De Paul team, scored five field goals and two free throws.

St. Mel Beats Fenwick.
Another Chicago quintet, St. Mel, followed De Paul into the semi-finals by scoring a 21 to 18 victory over Fenwick of Oak Park. St. Mel held a 10 to 8 advantage at the half, and was out in front, 17 to 15, at the close of the third period.

St. Patrick, Kankakee, Ill., was the third quintet to enter the semi-final round, eliminating Leo, 26 to 25. Leo trailed at the half, 23 to 14. Huot was the outstanding performer on the downstate team, collecting three baskets and five free throws.

St. Patrick of Chicago also entered the semi-finals by defeating St. Mary's of Huntington, Ind., one of the pre-tournament favorites, 40 to 29.

De Paul to Face St. Mel.

In the semi-final round tonight De Paul will play St. Mel, while St. Patrick of Chicago will oppose St. Patrick of Kankakee. The winners will play for the title tomorrow night.

The lineups:

DRAFT BANK BILL TO RELEASE BIG FLOW OF CREDIT

Treasury Seeks New Reserve Power.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Treasury experts worked today on a projected new banking bill to be submitted for White House consideration, one part of which would seek new powers for the federal reserve board in an effort to release billions in dammed up bank credit.

The plan was described by one authority as founded on relaxed eligibility rules for the redemption of commercial paper by the reserve banks.

This portion of the measure appeared likely to prove the most controversial of all in Capitol Hill. The plan would tend further toward a central banking system, managed from Washington.

Ease Eligibility.

Specifically, the drafters propose that the federal reserve board be given wide discretionary power to say what type of paper shall be eligible for rediscount. They would repeal the present limitation that eligible paper shall not exceed 90 days' maturity, or, if agricultural or live stock paper, nine months.

Those studying the proposal contend that long term industrial and mortgage loans make up most of the present demand for credit. Through new eligibility rules, they argue, banks could meet this demand without endangering their liquidity.

It has been estimated that a portion of from thirteen to fifteen billion dollars in time deposits could be employed in these channels. Another contention is that from fifteen to twenty billions in credit could be created by turning into the long term field excess reserves now idle because of the virtual disappearance of 30 day paper.

Considered as Alternative.

Putting banks into a position to make long term demands has been considered as an alternative to heavier direct government lending. Direct federal reserve board control, the drafters assert, would operate to prevent any inflation threat which might arise from the change.

The recent report on bank credit made to Secretary Morgenthau by Jacob Viner and Charles O. Hardy urged making sound working capital loans rediscountable at federal reserve banks. It recommended that the eligibility rules be modified so that paper should not be "merely because it has a maturity as great as six months nor because of the number of times it has been renewed."

While Secretary Morgenthau has said banking legislation should be held to a minimum, some measure is certain.

Machinery Plans Planned.

Federally insured loans to give industry up to date machinery were said authoritatively today to be the basis of proposed new legislation being worked out by officials of the Federal Housing Corporation.

Official sources contended such legislation would provide a potential out of $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 of steel, iron, and other capital goods.

These officials also said there was under consideration an amendment which would help to provide a ready market for mortgages obtained by the housing corporation. They said a mortgage discount agency would be set up.

Youngstown Steel Mills So Busy Holiday Is Cut

Youngstown, O., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Demand for steel is so great that mills in the Youngstown district will take only a one day holiday for Christmas next week in some cases, and in no plant will the holiday be more than two days. If Christmas day is disregarded in the reckoning, steel production next week will be at the rate of 45 per cent of capacity, schedules announced today indicated.

CHRISTMAS BONUSES GIVEN TO EMPLOYEES BY SEVERAL FIRMS

A Christmas bonus of approximately $35,000 in cash and food has been given by the Kroger Food Stores to its 2,000 employees in 335 stores, it was announced yesterday. Frank C. Lewman, general manager of Richmond Brothers company, announced yesterday that 2,000 employees would be given a Christmas present of one week's vacation with pay.

In Philadelphia Fels-Naptha Soap company gave its employees a bonus of from 12 to 25 per cent of the yearly salary, the amount being determined by grade and length of service.

A novel Christmas bonus, an increase in minimum wage of 37½ per cent—from 40 to 55 cents an hour—was announced yesterday by Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation. The increase affects 7,000 workers.

A bonus of 50 per cent of pay received in November was voted for 600 employees of the Acton Insurance company. Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc., announced a raise of 5 per cent in the wages of its 2,000 employees, effective Dec. 31. It will apply to all workers except salaried executives.

Employees of the Hammond Bag and Paper company will be given checks for 5 per cent of their year's wages and an extra day's pay.

The Campbell Soup company gave its 3,000 employees an $18,264 Christmas gift. The individual bonuses ranged from $10 downward on a graded scale according to length of employment.

Employees of the Lovell Manufacturing company found extra $5 bills in their Christmas pay envelopes.

"Easy Money" Period Forced by Treasury

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Current developments indicate a period of extraordinary "easy money" during the early part of 1935 and these conditions may continue throughout the year.

This situation is expected to lead to higher prices for government bonds—with a sympathetic advance in high grade municipals and other top notch issues—lower yields on new offerings, and an increased flow of commercial bank funds into one to three year industrial loans to sound corporations, especially those with early maturities to refinance.

The "easy money" conditions are largely artificial. They are being forced by the treasury's hothouse methods. But they are none the less real and effective, at least for the short pull.

Government financing to cover expenditures in excess of revenue is the basis of this situation. The banks of the nation are already jammed with excess funds and the existence of this idle money is gradually forcing the banks to seek additional loans and investments.

Instead of easing this pressure on the banks the government is increasing it by pushing up their deposits. It borrows more and more from the banks through the sale of treasury bonds, and at the same time lends much of this money temporarily on deposit in the banks. Instead of turning the money for the securities over to the treasury immediately the banks merely credit the treasury with deposits for the amount due.

Even as the treasury gradually withdraws these deposits to cover expenditures the gross bank deposits of the nation do not decline, because the people to whom the government pays the money for goods, services, etc., take the money to the banks and deposit it. The distribution of bank deposits changes a little, but not the total amount. Aggregate bank deposits of the nation are thus increased approximately by the amount of the increase in the federal debt.

This is not currency inflation, but it very definitely is credit inflation of the type experienced by the United States when the war when the national debt increased from about a billion dollars to a high of 28 billions. After being reduced to 16 billions the national debt began rising again after the beginning of the depression and it has been rising ever since. The bank troubles and attending panic last year interfered with the inflationary results of this debt expansion for more than a year, but the debt is now 23½ billions and the debt is now 23½ billions and the debt is now 23½ billions.

With the administration at Washington dominating the nation's banking structure through ownership of about one-fourth of the capital of all banks in the country and through practically absolute control by the treasury of the federal reserve banks there is not likely to be another failure in any treasury financing in the near future.

The commercial banks can be "persuaded" to buy large additional amounts of government securities for three reasons. First, as already explained, the very purchase of government securities breeds additional deposits which cry for investment; and second, the commercial banks realize that the treasury through its control of the reserve banks can keep prices of government bonds up, at least for a long time. And even if later on government bond prices should slip, the commercial banks have the privilege at any time of taking their bonds to the federal reserve banks and borrowing the full amount of their par value.

As for the reserve banks there is little choice. With Marriner S. Eccles, ardent New Dealer and protagonist of government spending, running the federal reserve board and possessing the power to put "new" men in charge of the reserve banks if the present officials refuse to obey orders, the federal reserve banks will do as they are told. They will buy government bonds if the treasury needs their support and they will manipulate the market if so ordered. Inasmuch as the reserve banks have the legal authority to issue money secured only by the government, the program could be continued indefinitely if necessary.

But it is not likely that all of the commercial banks' idle funds will be absorbed by the investments in government securities. With the bank examiners being told by Washington to be more generous in their appraisal of bank assets the banks are being encouraged to make "intermediate" loans to soundly set up corporations.

Recently several large corporations, such as Standard Oil of New Jersey and National Tea, have paid off early maturing bonds by borrowing from commercial banks on loans of the "intermediate" type. As corporations have become familiar with this new and growing willingness on the part of banks to make loans payable in installments over a period of one to three or more years, more of this type of financing will probably develop.

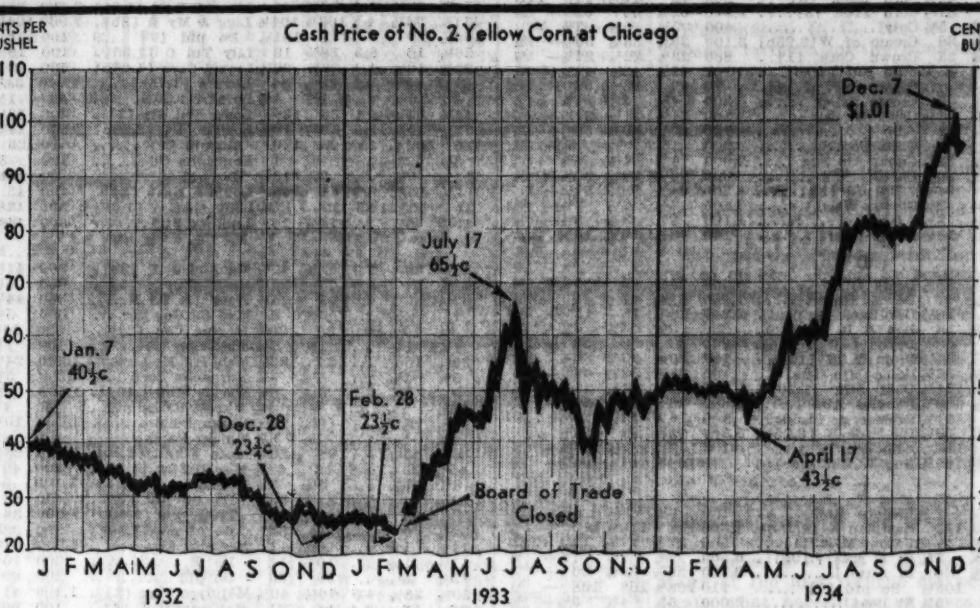

grants would provide cash in the hands of the holders of called or matured securities, which cash would either be invested in other securities or deposited to further swell bank deposits.

In New York the banks are using the Dec. 15 treasury financing to do a little "window dressing." They bought large quantities of the treasury's cash offerings for their own account and for the account of others, giving the treasury a deposit credit instead of actual cash. This has swelled their total deposits and will probably help them show a big increase in deposits for their year-end statements. Latest figures show that in the week ended Wednesday alone government deposits in New York banks increased from 425 millions to 735 millions.

33% More Space Taken for Rotary Club Exhibit

Exhibitors have already taken 33.3 per cent more space this year than last for the business recovery exposition of the Rotary club of Chicago, to be held in the Hotel Sherman Jan. 15 to 18, it was announced yesterday by W. V. Magill, chairman of the show committee.

How the Price of Cash Corn Fluctuated During the Past Three Years

Milwaukee Rd. Accepts RFC 3½ Million Loan

H. A. Scandrett, president of the Milwaukee railroad, announced in New York yesterday that directors of the line have decided to accept a loan of $3,500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The loan has been under negotiation for some time and the terms and collateral offered by the Milwaukee have been approved by the interstate commerce commission.

Proceeds of the loan will be used by the road to maintain its working capital and meet fixed charges of $2,699,556 which fall due Jan. 1. The company faces further fixed charges of $1,300,444 on Feb. 1.

The loan which the system is now getting from the RFC is regarded as a forerunner for further advances during the coming year. The company is seeking a total of $9,000,000 from the government agency for a period of three years to meet its 1935 requirements.

This amount is needed during the coming year to maintain working capital at minimum requirements, pay bond interest, meet principal maturities on equipment trust certificates. The interstate commerce commission specified in approving the $3,500,000 loan terms that the road should post $6,000,000 of the system's bonds. It is expected that the company will offer its equity in the Milwaukee Land and Commerce company when it asks for further funds.

The line said in applying for its loan that it earns this year of $6,596,287 but is $6,913,387 short of fixed charges.

North Western Plan Effective.

The Chicago and North Western railroad declared operative yesterday a plan for refunding Iowa, Minnesota and North Dakota railway first 3½ per cent bonds due in January, through the payment of one-half in cash and one-half in North Western 4½ per cent general mortgage bonds.

The cash is being supplied by the RFC.

The announcement said that 97 per cent of the first named issue and 91 per cent of the last named issue had been deposited in assent to the refunding terms.

Upon tender of the maturing bonds and receipt by the North Western of the RFC loan, the company will make the cash payment together with interest due on the underlying bonds on Jan. 1 and interest on the 4½s for the period from Jan. 1 to May 1, next.

CAPITAL CHANGE PLAN IS REJECTED BY RADIO CORP.

New York, Dec. 21.—(Special).—The stock committee of directors of the Radio Corporation of America, appointed to consider a capital readjustment plan today advised against the adoption of such a plan at this time, and the officers and directors concurred unanimously in this recommendation.

No information was available as to why the committee thought that the adoption of a readjustment plan at this time would be untimely, but it is apparent that there are insurmountable factors which might have determined this view.

Earnings for the first nine months of 1934 were equal to $1.14 a share on the $5 preferred stock and to $4.39 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock. In the 1933 period, there was a deficit of $1,793,370 before dividends requirements.

Approve Dissolution of General Aviation Co.

New York, Dec. 21.—Stockholders of the General Aviation corporation voted today at a special meeting in Wilmington, Del., to dissolve the corporation and to distribute its assets, which include 1,439,923 shares of common stock of North American Aviation, Inc. One and one-half shares of North American will be issued for each share of General Aviation stock. The liquidation was necessitated by the air mail act of 1934, which bars holding firms from controlling companies which receive air mail contracts.

Treasury Sells 75 Million 182 Day Bills at 0.12 Pct.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(Special).—Subscriptions to the latest issue of treasury 182 day bills, offered yesterday, totaled $29,250,000, secretary Morgenthau announced today. A total of $75,000,000 was accepted. The average price was 99.94, equivalent to an annual interest rate of 0.12 per cent on a bank discount basis.

CADILLAC EMPLOYEES VOTE INDEPENDENTLY OF LABOR AFFILIATION

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 21.—(Special).—Of the 1,593 employees of the Cadillac Motor Car company who cast ballots in the first primary election held under the supervision of the auto labor board, 1,176 failed to specify a labor group affiliation, tabulation of the returns today disclosed. Approximately 2,300 persons were eligible to vote.

Twenty-eight candidates were nominated, including Elmer Collins, president of the American Federation of Labor, Cadillac local; E. H. Gustafson, secretary of the Cadillac Employees' association; and the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, if he consents to serve. Father Coughlin may remain on the ballot as a district candidate in the final election to be held Dec. 28.

Candidates in the final election will have to inform the labor board whether they are seeking votes as representatives of an organized group or as individuals. Until these identifications have been received it will be impossible to tell whether the majority of nominees are union or nonunion men.

Wednesday's snow storm accounted for the smallness of the vote in part, analysis indicated. On the day of the election 1,620 of those eligible to vote were at work in the plant and 1,340 cast their ballots. Of the 738 absentee ballots, 600 were returned. Of the 1,340 eligible to vote, only 253 cast ballots.

Of the 274 votes on which union affiliation was specified 152 named the Cadillac Employees' association, 94 the American Federation of Labor, 29 the Mechanics' Educational Society of America, seven the Society of Design Engineers, and one the Auto Workers' union. There were 142 blank ballots.

DOLLAR STRONG IN LONDON BUT UNCHANGED HERE

New York, Dec. 21.—(Special).—Dollars gained ½ of a cent to the pound in London today but pounds closed unchanged at $4.94 in New York. In London the dollar closed at $4.93 1/16 to the pound, against a close of $4.94 1/16 yesterday. Strength of the dollar was attributed partly to the statement of Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, in London, that current stabilization would not be attempted at present.

The franc was steady in a quiet market. In Paris the dollar closed at 135.15 francs (6.98 cents to the franc), unchanged from yesterday's closing and today's opening quotations.

New York the franc was unchanged at 6.90 cents. Belgium sold at 23.40 cents, unchanged; the guilders were $2.45, unchanged; the Swiss franc 22.40 cents, off 1 point; and the lira 8.55 cents, unchanged.

The New York Federal Reserve bank today reported gold arrivals as follows: From France, $1,951,500; Canada, $1,675,500; England, $1,560,700. The bank also reported the receipt at San Francisco of $340,000 gold from China. There were no exports and monetary stocks showed a gain of $237,100 resulting from a purchase in gold held under earmark for foreign account.

In London bullion brokers increased the price of gold 2½ pence to 140 shillings 11 pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.80, based on the opening of sterling at $4.93½. Bars valued at $1,368,034 were purchased.

DECLARES BIG SHIP PROGRAM AWAITS U. S. AID

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A billion dollar shipbuilding program "will be started in American yards the moment the government enunciates a definite policy of aid for the American merchant marine," A. P. Haines, ranking operating chief of the Dollar shipping fleets, said today.

Haines expressed hope legislation giving direct federal aid to all American offshore shipping cargo carriers as well as passenger lines, will be sponsored by the administration at the approaching session of congress.

Duquesne Light Company
Dividend No. 28
Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 21, 1934
A quarterly dividend amounting to One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents per share (being one and one-quarter per cent (1¼%) on the par value of $100 a share) in the 5% Cumulative Preferred Stock of this Company, has this day been declared. Dividend payment will be made on January 13, 1935, to all holders of said 5% Cumulative Preferred Stock on the close of business, December 31, 1934. Checks will be mailed.

Freight Traffic Rise Exceeds Seasonal Gain

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(Special).—Freight traffic last week reflected improved business with a more than seasonal increase of 25,924 cars over the preceding week, the Association of American Railroads reported today.

The total of 579,935 cars for the week was 20,516 above the corresponding week of last year and 64,166 ahead of two years ago, when the totals were 559,419 and 515,769 cars, respectively. The gain shown during the week was about in line with expectations. Heavy shipments of coal contributed largely to the improvement.

Total loadings for the year to date amounted to 29,812,579 cars, compared with 28,232,823 in the corresponding period of last year and 27,280,141 in 1932.

Comparative figures for recent years follow:

EXTRA DIVIDEND VOTED BY BOARD OF SWIFT & CO.

Directors Act After Studying Earnings.

Upon receiving the final audited result of Swift & Co. operations during the fiscal year ended Oct. 27 the directors yesterday declared a special dividend of 25 cents a share, payable Feb. 15 to stock of record Jan. 25.

J. E. Corby, secretary, stated that this is the earliest date practicable for payment of the dividend, since the stock transfer books will be closed from Dec. 23 to Jan. 17, inclusive, for the purposes of the annual meeting.

U. S. Smelting Pays More.

The U. S. Smelting, Refining and Mining company declared a dividend of $3, compared with $2 paid in October. The dividend is payable Jan. 15. The company estimates 1934 earnings at $4,400,000 after taxes and charges and preferred dividends, equal to $8.32 a share on the common stock, against $3,532,057, or $6.68 a share, in 1933.

The Cook Paint and Varnish company declared a dividend of $2 on the 8 per cent preferred stock, payable Jan. 15, the first payment on the issue since January, 1932.

The Gorcham Manufacturing company declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable Jan. 15. On April 16 the company paid 75 cents.

Coast Counties Gas and Electric, subsidiary of Pacific Public Service, paid a $5 dividend on the common stock in November, compared with $2 paid in November last year.

BIG FRENCH AUTO WORKS IS PLACED IN RECEIVERSHIP

PARIS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The great Citroen Automobile works, capitalized at 400,000,000 francs ($26,000,000), was thrown into receivership today in an effort to keep the busy plant operating. Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin, rejecting Socialist proposals that the government operate the plant until its financial angle is unraveled, told the chamber he expected receivership "will avert the bankruptcy and ruin of an enterprise whose business amounts to 1,000,000 francs ($66,000,000)."

"The plant is fundamentally sound," Flandin asserted, "and financial reorganization should permit its continued operation without the use of taxpayers' money."

Andre Citroen, the Henry Ford of France, filed the petition himself after the court had rejected bankruptcy action brought by creditors.

4 More Banks Repay Funds to Depositors

State Auditor Edward J. Barrett yesterday announced four more Christmas repayments by closed banks. At the same time, the auditor stated that depositors of the Central Manufacturing District bank may receive their checks for an initial 22 per cent "dividend" this morning by calling at the District National bank. The payment amounts to $609,000.

A 5 per cent restitution by the Commercial State bank of Chicago Heights will amount to $22,982 and raise the total return to depositors to an even 50 per cent since the bank failed on Jan. 9, 1932. The checks will be available today.

Good Final Payout Seen.

Receiver William L. O'Connell reported also that $22,549 has been paid to preferred claimants and $139,630 in bills payable has been wiped out. The Sept. 30 report of the bank's condition showed a fairly good loss record and the book value of remaining assets two and one-half times the amount still due creditors, which would indicate a good final payout by the institution.

The Marshall Square State bank receiver mailed checks yesterday for a second repayment of 5 per cent, amounting to $23,534. The bank closed Oct. 2, 1931. Its Sept. 30 report showed no more than a fair outlook as to the size of ultimate return to depositors. Loans have been nearly 25 per cent in liquidating assets. Preferred creditors have been paid $6,047, while $184,063 has been erased in bills payable.

Makes 20 Pct. Return.

A 20 per cent return to depositors of the Congress Park State bank in Brookfield amounts to $5,658. Checks will be given out today, bringing the total repayment to 30 per cent. Half of the funds for the current payment were obtained from the stockholders' liability suit, and the other half from a loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Preferred creditors have been paid $11,890.

Depositors of the closed Union State Savings Bank and Trust company of Kenosha, Ill., yesterday received a Christmas gift in the form of a 5 per cent dividend, amounting to $29,690.

PAY ROLLS, WAGES SHOW DECLINE FOR NOVEMBER

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A decline of $6,000 workers on industrial pay rolls during November was reported today by Secretary Perkins. She said pay rolls fell off $3,915,000 from October. Miss Perkins said she found the report "very satisfactory," however, in view of an increase in nonmanufacturing employment and what she termed the lightness of the general fall off. November ordinarily shows a decline, she said. The secretary said a 9 per cent increase in employment in manufacture of agricultural implements also was "very encouraging."

Despite gains in wholesale and retail trade, anthracite and bituminous coal mining, and banks Miss Perkins said total employment went to the level of July, 1931. In October the level corresponded to that of March, 1931, she added. Total employment and pay rolls were not given.

Bar Silver Declines.

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The price of bar silver here, based on foreign quotations for the metal, dropped ½ cent an ounce to 53½ cents today, following weakness in spot silver in London and Shanghai. It was the largest decline since Oct. 13, when the price was off more than a cent in New York.

SENATORS SEEK ACCOUNTING ON SILVER BUYING

Treasury's Methods Are Criticized.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Believing the treasury's silver buying program has failed to meet congressional intentions, several silver bloc leaders announced today they would seek the "lowdown" on the situation before a congressional convenes.

Senator B. K. Wheeler (Idaho, Mont.), who intends to press for consideration of his free coinage remonetization measure, said his group had reason to believe purchases under last session's silver act had "slowed up" considerably and the treasury would be asked for an accounting of "just exactly what it has been doing regarding silver since adjournment of congress."

Legislation Not Needed.

The silver group, he said, would make the inquiry on its own initiative. New legislation wasn't needed, he insisted.

Some senators from the silver states, like King of Utah, have expressed satisfaction with the treasury's administration of the silver purchase act.

Senator McCarran (Nev.) said information had reached the remonetization group that the treasury had delegated authority to buy and sell silver to the New York Federal Reserve bank and the latter had passed on this power to the member banks. "This is not in the spirit of the purchase bill," he said.

Believes Buying Has Ceased.

Asserting the present price of the metal indicated purchases had practically ceased, he said: "If the federal reserve banks are buying and selling, who's getting the profit? The government should be getting it."

Senator Thomas (Okla.) saw little hope of the purchase program getting anywhere if the reserve banks were in charge of it because, he said, they favored a "do nothing" policy regarding silver.

He said the "international exchange people" had been "caught short" in discussing Chinese protests against the domestic silver program.

STOCKS BEHAVE BETTER DESPITE WEAK UTILITIES

Industrial, Rail Groups Gain Moderately.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, Dec. 21.—Outside of the public utility and New York traction share groups, the stock market behaved a little better today. The power and light shares continued to sink under continuing threats of government competition, higher taxes and lower rates, while the traction shares were made miserable by the city's rejection of an offer by common stockholders which administration experts held out of reason.

Gains among the more active industrial stocks ran to around 2 points. Railroads fared a shade better in response to the large increases in car loadings during the previous week and a year ago. The usual assortment of preferreds did their stuff in the shape of price swings of 1 and 2 points or more and the oils looked stronger than they have in a long time due to daily improvement in the gasoline price structure in the east.

Most of the new cashing. On the whole the constructive element found much in the day's doings to encourage hope and forbearance. Apart from the railroad freight revenue figures there was not a great deal in the day's news of market influence. Holiday trade was still going strong but brokerage house commentators were warning clients that the rush is about to end with the season that brought it on. Also, it was pointed out, the heavy industries are likely to follow their usual course of partial closings for the year-end.

Traders found some diversion in studying the permanent registration regulations but the promulgation of the rules had no appreciable effect on the market. Comment indicated a widespread feeling that there was nothing in the regulations which was likely to prove harmful in view of the fact that numerous corporations are already following the principles set down in the SEC.

National Distillers Active. National distillers were active, rising nearly 2 points on increased holiday liquor buying. Another big stock was the Consolidated Film Industries, which reached new peaks on brisk buying. The common stock crossed 6 1/2 as substantial prices changed hands and the preferreds moved up. Standard of New Jersey showed the way up for the oils scoring a net gain of more than a point. American Can and Allied Chemicals each moved up a point or so and U. S. Steel improved fractionally. Tobacco, motor and food groups enjoyed moderate patronage.

Silver shares came to the front again after their prolonged stay in the United States Smelting company and a belief that other companies are preparing to follow suit.

In the utilities division, pressure switched from Consolidated Gas to American Telephone, which was driven down 2 points before it could find firm ground.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—All bond groups closed irregularly easier on the exchange today. Trading was the slowest for a full five hour trading period in nearly a month, amounting to only $10,382,800.

The treasury list was uneven with gains in the more active issues running up to nine-thirty-seconds of a point. Losses in the group were mostly one-thirty-second to two thirty-seconds of a point.

Utilities Are Steadiest. In general the public utility bonds were steady, following the decline of the previous day on the threat of wider establishment of publicly owned systems.

A number of second grade rail issues sold off one to four points. However, a few high grade rails moved up fractionally. Most of the industrial issues showed minor irregularities.

South American bonds developed a heavy tone. Declines ranging up to a point were recorded in some of the obligations of Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Australia, etc. of 1937 lost more than a point. Austrian 7s of 1943 did not reflect in any way how bond traders and investors felt about the conversion offer announced this morning.

REGISTRATION RULES REGARDED AS 'REASONABLE'

New York, Dec. 21.—(P)—Permanent registration requirements for listed securities were regarded in Wall Street today as "reasonable" and "constructive."

When the securities and exchange commission took over the regulation of exchanges, a number of corporations were content to have their securities listed under the temporary registration requirements, but deferred judgment on permanent list until the final regulations were drawn up.

There had been considerable apprehension in Wall Street that a number of companies would delist their securities.

Lindsay Light.

Investors' Guide: May I trouble you for a statement on the financial condition of Lindsay Light? Thank you for it and last favor.—Mrs. R. K. L.

Answer—Lindsay Light company is a Chicago manufacturer of rare earth chemicals used in the production of pictures, optical glasses, cigarette lighters, etc. A small proportion of revenue comes from sale of gas mantles and incandescent fixtures.

For the first nine months of 1934 net income was $25,000, or 20 cents per common share, against net of $17,000, or 10 cents per common share, for the corresponding 1933 period. On the basis of October earnings, it is believed that fourth quarter earnings will be about equal to 16 cents per common share.

In 1933 the company earned $33,000, or 81 cents a common share, against net of $25,000, or 18 cents per common share, for 1932. For 1931 net income was $126,000, against $96,000 in 1930.

Current assets on June 30, 1934, were $109,000 and current liabilities were $109,000. Current liabilities include a $50,000 mortgage due Aug. 1, 1934, which has since been extended ten years.

There are outstanding 21,159 shares of $10 par 7 per cent preferred and 400,000 shares of $10 par common. On Aug. 12, 1934, charges were covered by the quarterly payment of 10 cents a share.

The preferred deserves a fairly good rating. The common is somewhat speculative at present.

Eastern Oregon Light and Power. Investors' Guide: Am the owner of $1,000 of Eastern Oregon Light and Power 5 1/2% due 1951. Are they a sound investment?—W. H. H.

Answer—Eastern Oregon Light and Power company is an operating subsidiary of Columbia Construction company. Its four hydroelectric plants furnish power to La Grange, Ore., as well as neighboring communities, having a total population of 25,000, with electricity. It also supplies gas to Baker.

Gross revenues during the last three years have followed a downward trend, and the margin by which charges have been covered has decreased correspondingly. Gross in 1933 was $375,000, against $420,000 in 1932, $479,000 in 1931, and $508,000 in 1930. In 1933 charges were covered by the slim margin of 1.07 times. They were earned 1.20 times in 1932, 1.40 times in 1931, and 1.55 times in 1930.

Current assets on Dec. 31, 1933, totaled $132,000 and current liabilities were $132,000. The $142,000 5 1/2% due 1951, and the $425,000 6% due 1953, are secured by a first mortgage on all assets of the company. They constitute the only funded debt.

The bonds are somewhat speculative.

DECEMBER SUGAR TRADE HALTED TO ADJUST SQUEEZE

Committee Is Selected to Adjust Differences.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Trading in December deliveries of sugar was stopped today by the New York Coffee and Sugar exchange and an attempt to adjust contracts between shorts and longs was delegated by the board of managers to a special committee of five members.

On the committee are H. H. Pike Jr. and B. B. Peabody, former presidents of the exchange; Frank C. Russell, a former vice president of the exchange; Walker Murphy, and George Hintz, president of the Cocco exchange.

The situation was at a definite impasse, so far as actual delivery of sugar called for by unliquidated contracts was concerned, because the market was reported totally different from Cuban sugar which, under AAA restrictions, may not be delivered before 1935. Nothing other than financial settlement by the trapped shorts remained as a solution of the problem.

Serves as Intermediary.

It became the office of the special committee to serve as an intermediary toward bringing longs and shorts together on a basis of voluntary settlement. It is expected that operators in the long position to whom the shorts are unable to deliver, may be urged to consent to settlements less severe than provided for such situation under ordinary circumstances by the exchange rules.

Sugar trade rule 15 of the exchange provides that a short, unable to make delivery when due, is subject to a penalty of 1/4 cent a pound (25 points in trading) above the spot price on day of delivery. The spot price is fixed regularly at 5 p. m. each day by an official committee of the exchange.

The lenient attitude toward the shorts, it is understood, was inspired by the fact that in this instance the inability of shorts to acquire sugar for delivery is due to circumstances brought about wholly beyond control of the exchange or any member.

Last Trade at 2 Cents.

The last price at which a trade in the December position was made on the exchange was at 2 cents a pound, yesterday. The spot price for this month's delivery of Cuban sugar, however, has been 2 1/2 cents, due to the agreement between the American refiners and the Cuban Sugar Institute.

It was estimated that the short interest, when trading in the December futures came to an end, involved about 25,000 tons, represented by 600 contracts.

The special committee was given authority to require all members having open positions in December sugar to appear before it to discuss their positions and to indicate their attitude toward settlement.
